Solari Special Report with Stephen Roach: Seeking U.S. - China Balance

“Both economies, the United States’ and China’s, continue to struggle— trapped in antiquated growth models that are not delivering the prosperity that politicians and leaders continue to promise. In these circumstances it is far easier to assure one’s constituents that they are not to blame than to tell them to lower their expectations and make sacrifices. True to the pathology of codependency, it is especially easier to blame one’s problems on foreigners than on oneself.”

By Catherine Austin Fitts

Did you read Stephen Roach’s recent WSJ editorial?

After you read his editorial, don’t miss his new book Unbalanced: The Codependency of America and China. It gives an essential overview of our opportunity to rebalance our relationship with China and our global trading partners as an integral step to shifting to a economic model based on real prosperity.

When you order it, please make sure to send copies to your Congressman and Senators.

To inspire you to do so, we are openly publishing our interview yesterday with Stephen as a Special Solari Report.
