Mysteries of the Middle Ages with Dr. Joseph Farrell - August 8th

*"The one duty we owe to history is to re-write it."
~Oscar Wilde*

By Catherine Austin Fitts

All efforts to ascertain the actual governance and related financial systems on planet Earth invariably lead to more questions than answers. And those questions lead us back into history. How did we get to our current situation? What happened? Who created this current reality? Like the present reality, the official story becomes less and less satisfactory. As a result, efforts to unpack our real history are an essential contribution to creating a positive way forward.

This week Dr. Joseph Farrell joins me on The Solari Report to discuss his latest book Thrice Great Hermetica and the Janus Age. We explore key players and events in the Medieval Ages and the Renaissance that had a profound impact on the development of the Americas and the manner in which we are governed today, including the Fourth Crusade, the Inquisition and the targeting of the Cathars and the Knights Templar and the European invasion of the Americas. Our discussion is about maps, money and monopolies and the deepest history of the global bullion trade. More importantly, it is about the cosmology and deep culture that has created historical divides between the Catholic Church and numerous groups that strove for a more enlightened world in the West.

Highlights from Last Week's Report

"Today we have two topics to talk about. The first is to check in and see what's happened in the equity markets over the last quarter and get a perspective. There is a lot in the news on the equity markets and the US stock market, and we want to make sure we sit back and look at things – as Chuck likes to do – with statistics in mind.

Then for the second part we're going to talk about how you identify the bottom in a market, and that's because obviously we like to buy low, not high."
