Precious Metals Market Report with Franklin Sanders - August 14th

By Catherine Austin Fitts

This week is the Precious Metal Market Report on The Solari Report. Franklin Sanders of The Moneychanger will join me to brief us on the latest developments in the gold and silver markets and share his insight on what technical analysis is telling him about current market trends. We will discuss the potential impact of the Federal Reserve's taper of quantitative easing through October. What could happen? What signs should we watch for? What steps do we take to navigate?

In Money & Markets this week I will discuss the latest news in current events and finance.

In Let's Go to the Movies, I will review a 2012 PBS documentary Secrets of the Dead: The Man Who Saved the World. It tells the story of Soviet submarine fleet commander Vasili Arkhipov who served as deputy commander on the K-19 during the nuclear incident that was the basis of the movie K-19: The Widowmaker and then prevented the launch of a nuclear torpedo during the Cuban Missile Crisis. The title comes from a statement from the National Archive Director that "a guy called Vasili Arkhipov saved the world".

The year after this documentary was made, another was made by the same name The Man Who Saved The World, about a Russian officer who declined to retaliate after receiving a false alarm from the Soviet nuclear early warning system in 1983. Both stories are a reminder that each individual is important, each makes a difference in this world and choosing peace can make all the difference.

Highlights from Last Week's Report

"Ladies and Gentlemen, it's my pleasure to welcome to The Solari Report Dr. Joseph Farrell for his quarterly interview. We're going to be talking about his new and very wonderful book Thrice Great Hermetica and the Janus Age.

I want to welcome him, but also, Joseph, I want to ask you about your impressions of The Secret Space Program conference. We were there together, and I would say it was quite an intense time."
