A Free & Inspired Life with Franklin Sanders - Aug 13th

To

This week on the Solari Report, Franklin Sanders and I discuss freedom and living an inspired life.

I came to a point in the late 1990's where I believed – after looking at aerial spraying and changes being made to the food supply – that there was a depopulation underway. And I had to ask myself, “Can I stay alive and be happy in such a world?”

Wellness: Staying Energized this Fall with Dr. Laura Thompson

This was a struggle for me. I can deal with personal attacks, but watching other people being harmed is something I find deeply upsetting. Ultimately, the struggle for me is: can I live in a world where this kind of evil is going on and still have joy? This was something I had to sort out. And it took me awhile.

The reality is that we are living in a world where certain forces do not want us to be free and inspired. But if we are going to live a free and inspired life, we have to find a way to create this life in the world as it is. It is very important that we accept the environment we have been given to work with – and that means no whining.

Franklin says:

“Freedom involves a certain mental freedom. In other words, you’re not going to be free if you’re measuring yourself by everyone else’s standards. So there’s a certain independence of standard you have to start off with. If I’m going to judge myself by the criteria of Wall Street or middle class America then I’m not really free...because those are not standards I set for myself.”

Highlights from Our Last Report

On my drive across the country, I stopped to discuss with Dr. Joseph Farrell our 2nd Quarter Wrap Up, The Worricker Trilogy and his new book, The Third Way.

If you haven't had the opportunity to watch The Worricker Trilogy – the BBC series I have discussed and written about extensively – now would be a good time to do so. I sent my DVD set to Dr. Farrell several weeks ago and he proceeded to watch it five times! I sensed that this series had an important message for Americans (and for the world) and Dr. Farrell more than confirmed my hunch.

With respect to the Anglo-American alliance, one possibility is that there is a fundamental non-alignment between 1) the need to manage risk in this relationship and 2) the hidden system of finance which Dr. Farrell often refers to. Have we reached a “boiling point” where one or the other has to come out on top?

If this is what's going on inside the Anglo-American alliance, then we're talking about big governance issues. These will either have to get worked out...or we are looking at difficult times for the United States. Remember that the City of London has more billionaires than America and the Crown runs the largest network of offshore banking centers in the world. Obviously, there are huge implications here.

Dr. Farrell goes on to state:

“Markets ultimately correct themselves no matter how much central control you try to place on them. This is economic reality. The real problem is: are we going to have the leadership? The American financial elite began in the early 20th century (through their network of foundations) to surround themselves with people who had the same ideology. When you surround yourselves with people who think like you do and you're confronted with a new circumstance that doesn't conform to your ideology, then you can't think outside the box.

"The fact that the American leadership is now calcified because it is no longer able to entertain any ideas that conflict with its central dogmas is a very bad situation. They are not responding to reality. The Supreme Court is not responding to reality. The markets are not responding to reality."
