Precious Metals Market Report, With Franklin Sanders - Feb. 18th

To

"With the US dollar still in correction mode one would think that commodities would be going through the roof like the precious metals complex but that's not the case. It appears that everything but the precious metals complex is starting to gather momentum to the downside."

~ Rambus

This week on the Solari Report, Franklin Sanders of The Moneychanger joins me to take a look at precious metals markets:

- How gold and silver performed in 2015. And why.
- Performance to date in 2016. Could the consolidation finally be over? Or is the current rally temporary, as it was in early 2015?
- Storage options for gold and silver. Subscribers have been sending questions about global and domestic depositories.

Franklin and I will review the likelihood that the primary trend in gold and silver is returning. Franklin has more confidence in the outlook for in 2016. I am concerned that the number of plausible but unpredictable scenarios is growing across all asset classes. So, expect a lively discussion!

One thing is certain: the dramatic rise in gold and silver prices in the past two weeks indicates uncertainty across global economies and markets.

Quote du Jour

"The warning, more than a century ago, attributed to Daniel Webster, remains as timeless as the document he revered. "Miracles do not cluster," he said, "Hold on to the Constitution of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands—what has happened once in 6,000 years may never happen again. Hold on to your Constitution, for if the American Constitution shall fall there will be anarchy throughout the world." ~ President Ronald Reagan, at the swearing in for Justice Scalia

Highlights from Last Week - Making Waves: Entrepreneurship for Everybody with Jason Bawden-Smith

Creative destruction is upon us – the shift between Global 2.0 (an industrial economy) and Global 3.0 (a networked economy) is accelerating.

So what happens when productivity rises dramatically? If the application of online and new technologies creates $1 of income by destroying/saving $20 or more of existing income/expense, how is that supposed to work?

Here are several examples in the recent article Why Every Aspect of Your Business is About to Change:

- Skype brought in approximately $2 billion in 2013. McKinsey calculated that in that year Skype transferred $37 billion away from old-guard telecom firms.
- San Francisco's taxi regulator reported that the number of fares per licensed cab fell 65% from March 2012 to July 2014 as Uber, Lyft, and others entered the market.
- When Airbnb entered Austin, Texas, hotel revenue fell by 8% to 10% according to Boston University researchers.

What is the process by which we invent new enterprises using the capacity that is now available? While we are at it, how do we reinvent a more peaceful economy, operating in a positive relationship with each other and our environment?

It's called entrepreneurship – and it's time for a lot more of it. This is despite the fact that the US and most of the G-7 political and economic leadership are doing a great deal to centralize control...which handicaps entrepreneurs and potential investors.

This week, Jason Bawden-Smith publishes his business biography, Making Waves. It describes how he founded four companies focused on solving environmental problems. Jason's achievements include introducing technology into Australia which reduced lead poisoning in children and lessened the impact of excessive exploration and mining activities.

To celebrate the launch of Making Waves, Jason will join me on the Solari Report this week to discuss entrepreneurship in changing times.
