The Food Series - Bill Niman - The Godfather of Grass-Fed - February 22nd

To Solari Readers

"We believe that the responsible treatment of animals and land stewardship are essential when striving to raise great-tasting, best-in-season grass-fed beef and free-range poultry. For these reasons, we are confident in saying the quality of BN Ranch meats is truly exceptional." ~ From Bill Niman's BN Ranch

This week on The Solari Report, Harry Blazer interviews the legendary Bill Niman.

Bill was the founder of a number of companies involved in the production and processing of pasture-raised meat products, two of which continue to operate today – Niman Ranch and BN Ranch. Bill has set the standard for good husbandry practices and quality of finished product in the pasture-raised domain. The pork, beef and turkey products that continue to bear his name have become the preferred fare of some of the best chefs and connoisseurs in the United States. The proof is in the pudding – I have been eating Bill's meats since 2005 and sending them as special gifts to friends and family.

Rarely does a leader enjoy such an impeccable reputation for knowledge, integrity and performance.

Harry and Bill cover the issues around producing high quality, pasture-raised meats from global geopolitics to how to ensure that you are sourcing the quality of food you need to be healthy. This is essential knowledge that you need to navigate your daily life coming from two of the top experts on food in the industry.

The Black Budget: The Crossroads of (Un)Constitutional Appropriations and Reporting

“The $52.6 billion “black budget” for fiscal 2013, obtained by The Washington Post from former intelligence contractor Edward Snowden, maps a bureaucratic and operational landscape that has never been subject to public scrutiny. Although the government has annually released its overall level of intelligence spending since 2007, it has not divulged how it uses the money or how it performs against the goals set by the president and Congress.” ~Barton Gellman and Greg Miller

Excerpt:

Even in just the last few days, there have been concerns that the bill that ended the recent government shutdown included provisions allowing the Executive branch to fund covert action without Congressional oversight or going through the usual Congressional oversight committees. The provision is currently a subject of debate, with a potential amendment to remove the exception opposed by some in Congress. (see Kelly, Erin, Spending Bill Limited Congress' Oversight of Secret Intelligence Activities, Senators Say, available at <https://www.usatoday.com/story/news/politics/2018/01/23/senate-intel-leaders-say-bill-reopen-government-strips-them-power-gives-white-hgives-white-house-mor/1057919001/>. As it stands, this bill waives the later discussed (already very limited) reporting and appropriation requirements of the National Security Act. It's not hard to see why it has raised more than a few eyebrows. Steps to change the language of the waiver were reportedly blocked in Congress. (see Nelson, Steven, Provision in Shutdown-Ending Bill Stokes Fear of Oversight-Free Intelligence Spending, available at <http://www.washingtonexaminer.com/provision-in-shutdown-ending-bill-stokes-fear-of-oversight-free-intelligence-spending/article/2646894>).

With such a recent move towards limiting Congress, and the people's, oversight in a situation already sparse on oversight, appropriations compliance, and reporting compliance. The time has never been better to ask, what is the Black Budget? How did it come to be? How does it work and, perhaps most importantly, how and why is it considered legal and constitutional?

Highlights from Last Week - Future Science - Muons and Neutrinos - Excitement and Excitation by Ulrike Granögger

Imagine a technology that allows us to see into all places and all matter. Or imagine one that gives us the power to communicate across the vast expanse of the solar system in mere minutes.

The implications are profound.

This week on The Solari Report, Ulrike Granögger presents the first episode of our new series Future Science. She takes us into the subatomic world of physics – into elementary particles called muons and neutrinos – and the implications of our growing understanding and application of knowledge about them. This includes a discussion of the Ice Cube Neutrino Observatory in Antarctica.

Extraordinary scientific and technological advances are driving the shifts in governance and resources underway. One of my goals for the Future Science series is to give you access to knowledge about advances that Ulrike considers important.

Better it is to appreciate what inspires change than simply to respond to the changes as they impact our lives.

Why should billionaires and the “breakaway civilization” have all the fun? Let’s all be part of inventing our future – this is part of coming into our personal power. Yet, with the rare exception of Dr. Farrell's books and website Giza Death Star – I have found very few sources that attempt to cover developments in science and technology and connect the dots to the spiritual, cultural, political and economic shifts underway.

As many of you know, every year I travel to Europe to study with Ulrike and learn from her investigations and research. Consequently, it is a great privilege to make her work accessible to our subscribers at last.
