Section I: Introduction

So, let's just dive into the introduction. I began protecting US financial resources in 1989. That started a process which has continued for more than 30 years of dealing with deep state tactics as a result of trying to protect all of us from the missing money operations and related financial fraud.

I dealt with many deep state tactics before 1989 because covert and operations and black budget operations, among other things, worked its way through my neighborhood and my life and the lives of all Americans. Deep state tactics were not a new thing as of 1989.

They have been growing steadily all my life, but it was in 1989 that I dealt with a particularly venal kind that had come to protect the people who are running the financial system way outside of the laws as we believe them to be.

It was never my intention to make a goal of bringing integrity to the Federal finances as an important part of my life's work and mission. At first, I was simply doing the job that I was asked to as Assistant Secretary of Housing in the first Bush Administration. Then I was trying to do my job as a Federal contractor asked to be Lead Financial Advisor for the Federal Housing Administration and basically oversee and worry about all the fraud in the mortgage system. Nevertheless, even after that I kept going back to the fact that most of our problems went back to a secretive governance system, and that governance system could do all the various 'shenanigans' that it was doing because it could finance them in a financial operation that could operate both secretly and outside of the law. It could create a system where the insiders have a 0% cost of capital and the rest of us have a 30% cost of capital. It's remarkable how much of the system is engineered with that differential of cost of capital that is hidden behind this wall of secrecy.

So, whether it was protecting taxpayers' money as part of serving as a government official or a government financial advisor, or after I finished litigating the closedown of my company that had served as a financial advisor, I had so many requests to help people with their finances. I spent 11 years as an investment advisor trying to help clients either clean up from the damage done to them by financial fraud – which, one way or another, always related back to the corruption in the Federal government accounts, whether it was immediate or one or two degrees of separation – or trying to protect clients from ongoing corruption and fraud, or as a publisher trying to communicate the same information to help protect my subscribers, readers, and audience.

I found myself consistently going back to the fact that 'the crime that pays is crime that stays'.

No crime is more profitable than crime engineered with free money from the US monetary and fiscal authorities. It's an exceptional system that the insiders have put together. It's a financial engineering feat, and I tip my hat to them. It's quite remarkable, and it's quite remarkable that they can keep it secret. Most Americans don't see the game and don't understand it, and they don't understand why the missing money issue is at the heart of their issue.

I once had a relative who would say, "Dear, the missing money is your issue; it's not my issue. My issue is peace."

They were a Quaker. I would say, "Don't you understand? If I can steal $21 trillion, then I control everything, including whether or not there is peace or war."

They didn't connect the dots. Maybe now they can. We are always optimistic. We are always willing for people to be able to see it.

As I continue to focus attention on the missing money throughout this 30-year period, I had a special challenge. That is: I have establishment credentials. That puts me in line for a much more significant opposition, and not only a more significant opposition, but a significant opposition which is very invisibly delivered. The system is willing to make significant investment in keeping it coming and keeping it very subtle and invisible.

The challenge in making me not credible is that the establishment itself has established my credibility. If I'm not credible, then why was I promoted to Vice President of Dillon Read? Why was I promoted to Senior Vice President at Dillon Read, and then Managing Director, and a Partner ——— — and Equity Owner and member of the Board of Directors of, what was at that time, one of the most important investment banks in the United States? It was also run, and at various times, owned by what later became two Secretaries of Treasury.

If you look at the person who promoted me to partner, he also became the Secretary of Treasury. So if I'm not credible, how did that happen? If I'm not credible, why was I appointed to Assistant Secretary of Housing, Federal Housing Commissioner? Why was I nominated by the President and approved by the Senate after a complete FBI investigation?

After that FBI investigation, my assistant came into my office and said, "You're not going to believe this. The person who has been doing your background check for the FBI wants to meet you."

I said, "Why does she want to meet me?"

She said, "She's never done a background check where people were as complimentary and there was no criticism of you, even from your ex-husband."

Sure enough, she was very petite and was 'four-foot-something'. This very petite female FBI agent walked into my office, which was a big Wall Street office with all glass on the corner. She walked in with a gun on her hip, which in 1989 was quite something.

So, how did I pass a complete FBI investigation if I'm not credible? I was appointed by the President after I left serving as Assistant Secretary to the Board of Sallie Mae, which is the student loan organization.

I was appointed after that by the Chairman of the SEC to one of his task forces. Then I was appointed to the Executive Committee of one of the top real estate associations in the country, and on and on and on. If you look at my complete resume at www.Solari.com, it's filled with many, many memberships, including board memberships of many of the largest or most prominent institutions in the country.

The reality is that if I'm not credible, then how in the world did all those things happen?

Our movie for 'Let's Go to the Movies' this week is Gladiator, which is one of my favorite movies. Those who know me know that I love the Scott brothers – Ridley Scott and Tony Scott. Ridley is still with us, but Tony is not.

They do a remarkable job of making great movies about deep state tactics. One of them is Gladiator, and in the movie – and I put this video up as the scene we have in the commentary – one of the gladiators is explaining to the protagonist, played by Russell Crowe, that before the Emperor of Rome can destroy him-before he can kill him-he has to kill his name. This is true in politics. If you just run around killing people, obviously people get 'bent out of shape'.

There is this great scene where one gladiator turns to the other and says, "Before he can kill you, he has to kill your name." That is certainly one of the tactics that I have experienced for a very long time, which was an extraordinary almost 25-year effort to destroy my name. Living through that is very informative of deep state tactics. It's the importance of 'brand'.

Another thing which also relates to the Gladiator theme, is poisoning. There are several poisoning references in Gladiator, but in the end the Emperor challenges the gladiator (Russell Crowe, who plays General Maximus) to a dual in the coliseum in front of the crowd. Of course, because there is no chance of him beating Maximus, he poisons him before the fight starts. It's very important in the battle for the people in charge to look like the winner and for you to look like the loser. So they kill your name, and then they try to kill you, but they try to make it look like they have won and that they are superior.

Part of all these tactics is how to load up the handicaps. It's like a horserace where their horse runs with the lightest number of pounds, and they have secret ways of loading score and scores and scores of pounds on the other horses, so they can make it look like their horse won.

Differentials and things like cost of capital or differentials in time productivity, are things that are engineered into the system to make it look like the leadership won or the members of the deep state won fair and square. It is very important for them to appear as winners.

Let me talk a little about why I wanted to do this Solari Report. I made a command decision late in the game to engineer the 2018 Annual Wrap Up to a collection of all our work on the missing money. It also included a new piece called Caveat Emptor, to help both our subscribers or more broadly, institutional investors understand that the issuance of FASAB 56 in October of 2018 constituted a material event, and they needed to do due diligence on treasury securities, but also any securities related to the US Federal credit.

I had found myself during the last two years, since the Skidmore report came out, explaining to reporters again and again and again, and finding myself refuting the same tired excuses that I had heard every year for 30 years. They seemed interesting 30 years ago, but I can't tell you how exhausting it is. Every year it's a new reporter, but the story is the 'same old same old.'

If I knew what I know now, I would go back and do a 'Frequently Asked Questions', so that I could answer them once and not have to answer them time and time again or deal with them for 30 years.

It feels a bit for me like being Bill Murray in an accounting and financial fraud version of Groundhog Day: You keep listening to the same lies. The same lies continue to work again and again and again, and the turnover in reporters is just a way of producing media memory wipe.

I thought, "I am going to sit down and document the history of dealing with the missing money phenomena from 1989 to date." So I wrote a personal history, and you can find it and it's public at www.HUDMissingMoney.com under the theme, 'The Real Game of Missing Money'.

The last part of my outline was going to be a session of the tactics, because when you go back and look at that full 30-year experience, you realize that it's quite remarkable of all the different tactics I've had to live with or the people around me have had to live with or experience or deal with or navigate. It's quite something – the obstacles that are placed in your way. I have learned a great deal about them just as a matter of experience.

I know somewhere at the CIA there is an Encyclopedia Britannica of tactics, and they are all in the manual. Of course, I didn't get that particular course; I got some of it, but I didn't get all of it.

So, I thought that I should really share this. I think that people need to understand the extent to which these tactics are applied. Increasingly, I am seeing everybody having to deal with them. Every day I see somebody else hurt by these tactics, and I think or say, "Welcome to my world."

I really believe that if I can teach them, then it can help people see the game and protect themselves a little better. So, that is one of my hopes as you listen to this, that this information will help you duck and navigate.

Thirty years of tactics is a lot of stories and a lot of different kinds of things. As I was writing the personal history, I realized that this would be much better in a separate audio. So, I pulled it out of the Missing Money personal history story and decided that we would do a series called 'Deep State Tactics 101'.

One of my favorite movies – as everyone who knows me knows – is one that really informs deep state tactics. It's called Enemy of the State. In fact, I put up the trailer for Enemy of the State, which is also a Ridley Scott movie. It's in the commentary for Part I of the series.

The first time that I watched Enemy of the State, I was sitting in the front row with a big tub of popcorn and said, "This is my training movie!" because it came out right when I was in one of the most immersive periods of dealing with physical harassment and all sorts of deep state tactics.

One of the lessons of Enemy of the State is that you solve your problems by finding Gene Hackman and getting him to teach you everything he knows. Gene Hackman is a person who once worked at the NSA, and understands the covert world.

Most people who haven't worked in the covert world can't even fathom that it exists, but you need to think of our world as a bit like Disneyworld. If you've ever been to Disneyworld – and I've never been, but I had a friend who took a course at Disneyworld – you have an entire parallel universe below ground level where everybody is managing and creating this lovely universe above ground. So, you have these two universes. Minnie and Mickey and that whole world is the overt world, and then below the streets is this subterranean world of operators who are arranging this lovely world above.

It is one of the reasons I like to use movies to help teach people who haven't had experience on the covert side and have trouble fathoming how that world thinks and acts. It allows you to walk into the parallel world and walk around in it.

Needless to say, I have seen thousands and thousands of tactics. Some of them are not against me; some of them I have seen used against clients or subscribers. I am going to cover both those which I have direct experience with and indirect experience with.

One thing that I learned is, when you run a financial system in actuality, when your cash flows and your credit flows are very, very different than what you are officially saying that you are doing, and you have reached the point with AI and algorithms where you can literally control and manipulate prices and ways that are amazingly uneconomic but finance-central, —— — or make it possible to engineer central control, you really do have a financial matrix. The way to understand how it operates is really one jigsaw puzzle piece at a time. It's through the thousands of events and experiences.

I've done plenty of reading and research to corroborate what my own experience is. So, you go back and forth between your experience, the experience of clients, subscribers, family, others, and then through the reading and research. The thing that ties it together for me is that I view everything through the prism of the mathematics of time and money. I find that if you look at things with that discipline, over time you can come to an estimation of what is happening with remarkable integrity. But you have to be able to hold to the discipline of looking at things mathematically instead of emotionally. It can be very difficult to do.

As I sometimes say, "I've lost my state of amusement." That is when I have to go back and visit the cows and the horses in the pasture behind me, or listen to Bach.

There are several categories of tactics that I have dealt with as a result of my focus on the missing money, and I am going to cover all of them. But I thought it might be helpful to look conceptually at them organized this way.

The first are general tactics. As a very wealthy, prominent individual, I had protection from many of the things that happen to the general population, although I grew up in a very poor neighborhood. So, I saw a lot of what happened to the poor side of the population or dealt personally with some of it.

Losing the protection and the insider status, I became much more knowledgeable about what the general population is dealing with — – which has gotten steadily worse over the last 20 years. That has really helped to inform me tremendously in a way that you just can't understand if you are wealthy and protected from it.

Part of it is that when you are in that insider's world, everything works effortlessly. It's amazing. When you're not in that world, it's amazing how very little works, or how well you have to plan, and how hard you have to try to deal with it.

There are two kinds of major arbitrages between insiders and outsiders. One is that their cost of capital is 0%, and we are financing their 0% cost of capital, and our cost of capital is about 30+%. Then their time is much more productive than our time is. Our time is engineered, whether it's phone systems or computer systems or roads or bridges or infrastructure, we are dealing with a differential in time productivity equivalent to the differential in the cost of capital.

Political targeting is another area of tactics that you deal with. For eleven years when I was litigating with the Department of Justice, I was very specifically targeted. I was targeted spiritually, legally, financially, and I was smeared. I had to deal with extensive covert operations and physical harassment.

Since then, it has been nowhere near as immersive, but as a leader of independent media, I definitely deal with some. I find it unbelievably irritating. It's as if, "Will this never go away?" So I am sensitive to it.

Another thing that I deal with, which is probably the most difficult for me as a member of independent media, is economic warfare.

There is no doubt that your competitors – and this is not the government; this is competition – do everything that they can to raise costs, lower revenues, and make life difficult. That is what part of the censorship and all the social media is about. It is one of the reasons I would never get on or depend on social media.

I didn't want to use Facebook; I resisted it for years. Then I finally was talked into it for about two or three weeks. Then our list got hacked, and I said, "I was right. I should never have made the mistake of trying."

I do use Twitter, but keep an independent infrastructure as much as possible. If you look at what we have to do to create the necessary redundancy of systems and phones and computers and mailing, because we can count on constant sabotage and in all these different systems, it is unbelievably expensive. If I estimate the costs, it is about $100,000 a year – which basically is the system skimming off 100% of our profits.

Gaslighting. When we interviewed Patrick Wood for 'Technocracy', I had the famous movie Gaslight on only so you could understand the concept. Part of the struggle with dealing with all these things is that other people can't see the game. So, you are dealing with 30% cost of capital. They are dealing with a 0% cost of capital. You are dealing with constant interference with your phones and systems. In the meantime, you are having people tell you, "You are not as efficient as those guys."

Other people can't see it, so you are constantly being Gaslighted. You need to be able to manage the process of being Gaslighted and understanding that you can see things that others can't.

Much of this comes because people can't fathom that the system works the way that it does. I will never forget going to Franklin Sanders' farm about 2012. Somebody had written in the financial blogosphere a wonderful piece that they removed right after I started to talk about it. It was called, "If this is true, Kaboom!"

It was about the mortgage servicing fraud. It started, "Catherine Austin Fitts has been saying this for a long time..." and then they proceeded to describe the extent of the mortgage servicing fraud and contemplating the fact that what I've been saying about the extent of the mortgage fraud was really true, which you could tell that had been hard for them to fathom, but they were beginning to understand it.

So, I was laughing about the fact that we had gone through the entire bailout period, and this very capable, astute fellow – still as of 2012 – didn't understand what I, as a former Assistant Secretary of Housing and Lead Financial Advisor to the Department of Housing and Urban Development, was saying. It was shocking to me that he still hadn't faced what I was saying was true.

Franklin looked at me, and said, "I've never believed you."

I almost fell off my chair and said, "Why?"

He said, "Well, look. If you look at the capacity of the people running the country, whether it's the FBI, the CIA, or the Department of Justice, they only have the ability to track and interfere with maybe 24,000 or 25,000 people."

I said, “Franklin, don’t you understand that with an NSA system and software and AI they can put the equivalent of a Stasi team 24/7 on every person in America, particularly if they have a smartphone.”

He couldn’t comprehend that. He was in the Stasi world; he was not in the NSA world of Enemy of the State. So, unless you understand the digital systems and what they have been able to accomplish with them and how the money laundering and the financial fraud work, this is the benefit of understanding the PROMIS software story and reading Black Money by Michael Thomas.

You have to understand the revolution of digital systems to understand the revolution of controlling and managing and replacing markets with technocracy. Franklin, God love him – is a wonderful man and extremely intelligent and very capable –and didn’t see the rise of the smartphone and what it meant. He didn’t see the rise of the NSA and what it meant. So, he couldn’t fathom that what I was saying was true.

So if you are me, here you have a wonderful ally who you have worked with for eight years, and it’s devastating to find out that the entire time he hasn’t taken you seriously. You get that incredible feeling of Gaslight, and then you drive home trying to find your state of amusement again.

Another aspect of the tactics are those designed to make you a pariah. Nobody wants a posse on their tail. It is made clear to so many different people that if they associate with you – and I’m speaking more about the litigation section than now – that is what will happen.

I remember while I still had a very beautiful home in Washington – it was an old carriage house and stable that had been renovated. It was in the middle of a block in downtown, and all sorts of people loved staying at my home as they were coming in and out of Washington for business reasons. During the early part of the litigation, I had a houseguest who went walking, and someone approached him and said, “If you stay at her house, we will put you on the list, and you will be targeted too.”

Then you stop inviting people to be houseguests because you don’t want to put them in that position.

So, you find yourself living in a state where you go from being highly wealthy and prominent with a Rolodex to die for to a world where almost nobody wants to be associated with you.

I will describe this story later, but they targeted my uncle, who had bought my share of the family farm. I needed the money to help deal with some rather nasty, dirty tactics by the Department of Justice. He got a call from the Inspector General’s office at HUD, and they said, “We want the records on your family farm.”

I warned him that they might do this if he bought it. He said, “I would be happy to send it to you, but I need a letter so that I can have the letter reviewed with my lawyer. I want to make sure that all of this is on the up and up and compliant. Just send me a letter, and I will be happy to send you the files.”

About a week later, three FBI persons and a man from HUD showed up at his door at night in New Hampshire with a subpoena. Remember, he said that he was going to send them the files, and he would be delighted to do so. There was no resistance whatsoever and they only did it to hardball him.

Apparently there was a big family ‘pow-wow’. Everybody got on the phone to discuss whether they should drop me or not because they didn’t want to get targeted as well. They didn’t want their name going on the list.

My uncle said, “It’s very interesting because for many, many years whenever anybody in the family has been in trouble, she has always helped them, so I’m not going to drop her. I am going to stand up and support her, so we shouldn’t drop her. She always helped us when we were in trouble. She always helped everybody else.”

In fact, at that point, I calculated how much support I had given.. I gave or loaned $250,000 to family and friends. It was those many acts of generosity that literally saved my life and was part of the reason my uncle supported me. He knew that if I hadn’t lent them or given them that $250,000, he was going to be the banker of choice.

Anyway, finally is ‘The Road Less Traveled’. Each time you go through the last 30 years of dealing with the missing money, there are all these branches in the road, and you have to decide whether you are going to choose integrity or you are going to choose convenience. You just keep branching, and as you branch, you communicate with many who take the road of convenience. One of the ways that you learn about all the tactics is it’s a long, slow process of saying who they buy away, how they buy away, and in the process, there are thousands of very, very unethical behavior and betrayals by other people towards you.

It goes to show you that it's a long education in how many people $21 trillion can buy.

I sometimes say that $21 trillion can buy almost everybody.

The other thing that I've learned is that I will often say to people, "This is how I bless you," as they get bought away. Many times, they are clear, "Look, I have a family. I need to do the right thing, and this is too attractive to turn down."

I say, "I agree. God bless you. Let me know how I can help."

So, let's talk a little about the players. If we are going to look at goals, we need to understand the many different players. They all compete and cooperate. In the short term, they have different goals. In the long term, they are all helping Mr. Global centralize or 'harvest' as they do.

Now I'm going to be very US-centric. Most of my experience is in the US, but I have plenty of experience in the G7 and commonwealth countries, and a bit outside, but mostly G7 and commonwealth. I find this true for most places, but the US is unique in that the NSA – the one-way mirror – is much more invasive than most other places within the G7 countries and commonwealth. The cycle of disrespect between the leadership and the population is much greater here in my experience.

There are always exceptions to the rule, but I find the police-state and the dirty tricks aspects to be much worse in the United States and much more prevalent than in Europe or the other commonwealth countries. It's everywhere; this is a global phenomenon. The question is:

Are you hitting it early, and is there a place that you can run to where it will come later? But it's basically everywhere, because much of it moves through the digital systems. The more cell towers and smartphones that are everywhere, it's the same problem.

It's a very complex picture because all these different players in the short run have different goals, and they compete and cooperate.

First and foremost, there are the US intelligence agencies. The one that I dealt with the most my entire life is the CIA, and I'll throw the DEA in there because I became very interested in the CIA drug-running operations. I should also give DOJ credit for that as well.

The NSA runs the one-way mirror and is extremely powerful. There is a great new part of Season 3 on the TV series The Good Fight about a NSA operative taking pity on the protagonist trying to intercede and help them. It's a great snapshot into the NSA operations. If you haven't watched the documentaries and movies about Snowden or watched Zero Days about the Stuxnet virus, The Good Fight is a very entertaining way to get a handle on the NSA system and what it means to you.

Certainly, watch Enemy of the State if you haven't. It's old; it's from 1998, but it's a great snapshot on the NSA system.

The DIA, which is the Defense Intelligence Agency, and the ONI – remember it was the ONI office in the Pentagon that was apparently doing an investigation on the missing money that got blown up – are players in the missing money story.

My guess is there are many rumors that there is a secret intelligence agency funded within the Department of Justice Asset Forfeiture Fund. I bet that is in fact true, and I bet that I have dealt with those ‘boys’.

Next is the US enforcement agencies-the FBI and local enforcement working for them. The speed at which those people can pick up the phone and get the local police and the local sheriff ‘dancing to their tune’ or ‘suckered’ by what they say – which is not true, but the local people don’t know that.

Interestingly enough, I have had remarkably good experiences with the FBI. The FBI – to the extent that I know dealing with them – have been not only on the up and up, but quite amusing and helpful. So, I certainly have read and studied tremendous criticism of FBI conduct, but I have to tell you that if it wasn’t for the FBI, I’m not 100% certain that we would have won. They were remarkably stand-up and even helpful.

I’ll never forget when they gave us a document. We did a FOIA to the FBI, and they gave us a document that said, “We have investigated this home loan sale thing with Hamilton and HUD, and we can’t find anything wrong.” It was basically saying that we were as ‘clean as a whistle’.

At one point in court, we were fighting with Judge Sporkin who was a former General Counsel of CIA and ‘dirty as all get out’, in my opinion. Our lawyer pointed out that we had such a document. The judge didn’t believe him, so the lawyer pulled it out and gave it to him. Sporkin said, “They gave you this?”

You could tell that he was making a mental note, “I’m going to call them and kill those guys. How am I going to falsely frame her if they are helping?”

It was very funny. So, I have nice things to say about the FBI.

Foreign intelligence agencies operate in the US and foreign countries. I have dealt with the Russians, the Germans, the Italians, the Israelis, and probably more that I don’t know about. They are clearly foreign enforcement agencies, but because they are not necessarily authorized to enforce in the country or in countries outside of their jurisdiction, I don’t bump into them as much as the intelligence agencies. Needless to say, all these agencies have contractors. A lot of times during our litigation, I was dealing with people who were clearly on a cost-plus contract, not government employees.

One of the problems that has happened in this country is that contractors can make money doing surveillance or targeting or tracking individuals. So, the more that they can persuade the government or politicians that this should be done, the more money they can make. It’s a big, big business watching and manipulating and playing with Americans. It’s almost like we don’t do productive things here anymore; we just manipulate and pick on each other.

Proprietaries are companies that essentially depend on government revenues. A HUD property manager company like the old NHP would be a proprietary. You get many of these situations where a companies-not really a private company, but it looks like a private company and I would say that Microsoft was an NSA proprietary, and I don’t know if it still is but it was in the 1990’s –

–board of directors think they are the boss, the CEO thinks that he is the boss, and Langley at the Department of Justice think they are the boss. You get these very murky situations where decisions get changed and changed again, and changed again as the covert forces come in and demand that the company behave in ways which are good for whatever the covert agenda is, as opposed to what is in the best interest of shareholders – or what looks like the best interest of shareholders.

Organized crime networks and drug games. When we brought the wall down, the organized crime behind it flooded out and started linking, among other things, through the Ukraine and to Israel and into New York. We saw with the Rape of Russia, the US intelligence agencies and the State Department Treasury team up with the Russian mafia. We certainly had that all along because it was the Italian mafia that helped the US land in Sicily and in Italy, and it was that amazing joint venture between the mafia, the Vatican, and the CIA that opened the US up to drugs after World War II. It was a command decision that we were going to bring in drugs and use that to pool capital to build the multinational corporations and to continue to finance covert operations.

Organized crime networks have grown and grown and grown. Whenever I am in a county, I look at the local drug gang as the distributor for the CIA and the Department of Justice. I believe they are just the local distributor.

They often do dirty tricks. So, I am assuming that it was one or more contractors who were in charge of doing much of my surveillance during the litigation. You have stringers, and some of the stringers come out of the drug gangs and organized crime, or they just use the drug gangs to target you.

I'm assuming that if I am ever assassinated, it is not going to be by a professional hitman; they will send one of the drug gangs around. They have done it before. One of the members of a drug gang came very close to dying. He was afraid, and he left. But I'm assuming that they are going to send one of those groups and tell you that it was an act of arbitrary crime – which it will not be. Although those people have smartphones, they are all on the payroll.

Next is secret societies. Secret societies essentially run the world. They've the world network down to the molecular level, and it's been that way for hundreds of years. This country was started by the Masons, and it was built by the Masons. They have had the place networked all along. The complete building of the country has emerged out of those networks.

You have different groups. You have the Jesuits going up into the Vatican Bank and the big pools of capital behind the Vatican. You have the big pools of capital behind the Vatican. You have the big pools of capital that are primarily Mason that are run through the charters created as part of the Revolutionary War, and are the big endowments and foundations. So, you have these huge pools of capital, and the secret societies really play a leadership role in managing those resources, as well as managing the resources of place. So, every county in America is basically optimized by those secret societies.

It's one of the reasons – and I can say this now because they know I'm doing it – I never stay in a place for longer than 30 days. When I was a child, if you were in and out in 30 days, the local Masons weren't responsible for you or didn't take an interest in you. If you were gone in 30 days, you weren't their problem. I found that to be very convenient.

I think that everyone who is a subscriber to 'The Solari Report' has heard me tell 'The Red Button' story. If you haven't, please look at 'The Red Button' story, which is on video. It is in several places in my writings. Just do a search for 'Catherine Austin Fitts and 'The Red Button'' and watch our little video on 'The Red Button' story.

Essentially, what 'The Red Button' story tells you is that what everybody in America wants is their check, and they want to pretend they are good Christians or good people or good whatever, and to do that, they need a story of 'I am good'. They need a story that will allow them to feel good about who they are and allow them to keep taking the check that comes from what we are doing around the world that is clearly outside of international law.

Everybody wants and needs a story of 'I am good'. As long as the story of 'I am good' works, then they don't have to worry about it. It's like a form of political methadone.

We need to understand that much of the population only wants a story of 'I am good' and the story doesn't need to be true. It doesn't need to be right; it doesn't need to make any sense whatsoever. If you look at the story explaining what happened at 9/11, it makes absolutely no sense. It's scientifically and financially impossible. But people don't care; they just want a story of why they are good, and they want a story that they can pretend and that the establishment will condone. They don't want a story that the establishment is going to pull the rug out from under them.

You will find about the general population that many, many members of the general population want, what Franklin Sanders used to call, 'the treats of the tapeworm'.

So, the tapeworm was my nickname for the system that is centralizing control and ‘sucking up’ this financial harvest, but the tapeworm is very clever and is handing out treats – whether it’s status or money – and many, many people just pine for those treats. Needless to say, the amount of mind control that we have in the population now that mind control can be delivered through digital systems on a very economic basis and highly targeted one by one on smartphones or internet, is very high.

With the one-way mirror, combined with amazingly economic and very powerful mind control, combined with the fact that most people don’t want to be bothered with dealing with reality, and they just want the story of ‘I am good’ joined with their desire for treats of the tapeworm, I think that the hardest thing for our subscribers to face is that the general population is very, very complicit in what is occurring.

There are many times that someone is complicit for good reason, and that is they are trying to protect their family and do the right thing as a fiduciary, and they have a fiduciary obligation as the head of a family or member of a family, and they have a fiduciary obligation as a citizen. Frankly, their obligation to their family has to come first. I’m not talking about them; I am talking about people who really do some evil things to get the treats of the tapeworm.

I was so shocked when I worked in Washington. One of the reasons that I got crossways with the establishment – which was never my intention to do and I never thought that I was acting outside of the boundaries of what I had been asked to do, and if I had known that, I would have gotten back inside the tent – was the fact that you had the US government bringing drugs into neighborhoods, running an entrapment on innocent young children who were just walking down the street.

They were dropping SWAT teams into these neighborhoods and rounding up youths who were walking down the street, and sticking them in prison, and then cutting the budget of the public defender's office so that they couldn't have any kind of representation. Then they had to 'cop a plea', and in the meantime, everybody was making money on private prison stocks. This was the story that I told in Dillon Read.

Who is leading it? You have scores of ivy league-trained African American attorneys and politicians, whether at the Department of Justice or Congress, who are absolutely playing ball and making sure that this is all engineered. It is a bit like the Africans who teamed up with the British and the French and the Portuguese to round up and collect all the African tribesmen to deliver them into slavery.

So, here they are basically building – with very fancy financial engineering – slave labor camps. The complexity of it is to try to make it look like it is something that it's not, but that is what it is. They are just rounding up people and want to move them, and want to gentrify the neighborhoods.

Kate Graham, Publisher of the Washington Post, and many politicians and people in Washington on both sides of the aisle were going to make a fortune on DC real estate gentrification. So, you have to round up the 'Indians' and get them out of town, and that is what they did. It was no different than clearing the Indians off the land or moving people to forced labor

They put them in prisons where their labor was marketed to corporations or by a for-profit company at the Department of Justice to US agencies, including the Department of Defense, where they essentially work at low cost, where they work as slave labor.

It's all made to look very socially acceptable, but the reality is that there was nothing different between what we were doing and what the Nazis were doing in terms of slave labor.

As Jon Rappoport says, "It was 'Hotel Auschwitz' and it was set up so that everybody was making money on destroying neighborhoods." So, the African-American lawyers are making money because they are rising. When Eric Holder left the Department of Justice, he got a big partnership at a big Washington law firm. So, everybody is rising and making money. The Department of Justice is like the Sheriff of Nottingham; they are making civil money penalties and criminal money penalties.

They are destroying neighborhoods making money, but what do they care after the neighborhood is destroyed? Kate Graham and her pals can come in and buy all the real estate cheap, and then make a fortune on gentrification.

I'm watching this, and I can't believe that everybody is going along. I know that if you permit this kind of lawlessness to start and grow, ultimately, – because it is a system that has a negative return on investment and everybody is making money from things that shrink the pie – whenever you start a system that makes money from shrinking the pie, where do you think it is going to go? It is like a tapeworm eating a body. After they finish working their way through the poor neighborhoods, where are they going to go next? Well, that is the message of California. They just went upscale; they went to Santa Rosa.

What I will say to the people in Santa Rosa is this: We could have stopped this 20 years ago, but you didn't want to. You wanted the story of 'I am good'.

There are many players in the pictures and that's part of the challenge of understanding the tactics. Because all the players compete and cooperate, it's very organic, and you bump into all sorts of crazy combinations. That's why it's very valuable to be able to identify both the individual and institutional outlook—the loyalties, the incentives, and the risks of the specific players that you're dealing with in any particular situation.

Now the other thing that's important to remember is that everybody is a prisoner of the system. You can go very high up in the system that you understand. What you get there are all the players running operations dependent on the system. They don't have the power to 'buck' the system. The governing system is very subject to consensus, so you have a committee process. Committees come together, they make decisions, and they have rules. They may not be the rules that we understand to be the laws, but they still have rules and the system has rules.

Once a decision is made, it's final. You just cannot 'buck' those systems; it is not permitted. And as those decisions get made, the system locks into all sorts of different financial arrangements and investments that really lock everybody into those positions.

Now what is remarkable is the speed at which the organization can communicate and act top to bottom. I never cease to be amazed at how you can have the message go out from Washington, and within very short order, get the local people doing what you want; 'dancing to their string'.

Everyone's connected by the cash flows and the digital technology and surveillance, so the connections are remarkably tight.

Before I finish our discussion of goals, there are two caveats that I want to make about these materials.

One is that I am going to censor some material if information would bring harm or significant expense to the Solari team or legal expense, or threaten my life. One of the reasons I'm alive is because I'm very careful in certain respects not to do something that's really going to 'poke a stick' at somebody who can put a gun to my head.

Because of that, I'm going to avoid discussing certain topics or stories for now. So, some censorship is going on, but it shouldn't detract from the utility of the material. I have a 31-page outline that's very detailed, and I'm sure that I have in there everything that I can think of that would really help you navigate the system. I don't think it's going to detract from helping you understand how the system works or to use it to do a better job of protecting your time and money. So, that's my first caveat – some censorship going on.

The second caveat is that this is a lot of material, and I'm going to take the time to go through all of it – including many stories. Stories help you understand the phenomena; it's one of the reasons I like to use movies. They're a great way to empathetically get you involved in the stories. This means there is a lot of material and this is going to be long. I will break it down into parts so that you can be selective about where you dive in and where you don't.

Section II: Solari Report Resources

Before I dive into the specifics, it's important for you as a Solari Report subscriber to know that there is a wealth of resources at The Solari Report to help you deal with a world that has this level of invasive surveillance and manipulation occurring.

I want to walk through some of the resources available, and of course, I would encourage you – if you are looking for help with something in particular – to reach out to us at ‘Ask Catherine’ for my weekly section where I respond to questions and my weekly commentary. So, if this doesn’t do it for you, you can always ask more at ‘Ask Catherine’ at www.Solari.com.

1. Primary Trends. First of all, it’s very important to understand the primary trends, even though the leadership can finance things that are way outside of fundamental economics. Clearly, they make decisions about where things are going to go. They invest accordingly and then the flows move in those directions, and it’s very important for you to understand those long-lived economic flows. If you know where the river is running, it will make more sense to see where the flows go.

One of the goals of the Solari Report wrap ups is to help you see the big picture. So, if you look back at all of our themes, whether it’s the Global Harvest, the Rise of the Asian Consumer, Investment Screening, Space-Based Economy, Megacities – all of these are to help you see where globalization, new technology, and big secrecy are in the process of taking us.

It helps you to see where the leadership is trying to go and why. So, having that background is essential if you are going to have a framework on what is happening. So number one, is to understand the primary trends.

2. Control is both a spiritual and material phenomenon. What we are dealing with is a spiritual war as well as a material war. It’s interesting because I get myself into so many of these situations where I’m trying to figure out: Is this the spiritual war or the material war or both? It can be tricky. Sometimes you can think that the spiritual war is the material war or vice-versa.

Part of the challenge of this is that the material war is increasingly an invisible phenomenon. So, there are parts of the material world, if you look at the one-way mirror and the reason the NSA system has been so incredibly successful, is because it is invisible to most people. They really have trouble seeing it or envisioning how it works.

You have to watch the third season of The Good Fight to see a great demonstration of the NSA system. You can also see Enemy of the State. That movie is also great in helping you to understand it.

So, whether it's EMF radiation or the one-way mirror, there are all sorts of things going on in the material world that are invisible as well. What is frustrating is that all of us – and I described this when I was describing the Gaslighting – are dealing with friends and family and people in our own lives who can't see the invisible, whether it's the spiritual or that portion of the material world which is invisible. We are increasingly dealing with people who are hyper materialists and are phenomenally naïve about what is going on with invisible technologies. The more sophisticated our covert technologies get and the more they can manipulate it, it is very, very difficult to deal with a population who literally can't see the invisible systems working upon them, particularly when they are part of what is being weaponized.

One of the reasons I try to get subscribers to watch The Kingsman movie is because populations are being weaponized, including to be violent. We need to know and understand this. It's very tricky to operate with people who can't fathom that this is going on.

So, control is both a spiritual and a material phenomenon. It is good to remember that.

There are great resources on both spiritual warfare and the challenge of dealing with this. I did one Solari Report on spiritual warfare with Jon Rappoport and one with Franklin Sanders. I have a great interview with Jon Rappoport called ‘Matrix Revealed’ and another one called ‘The Power of It’. I did an interview with Harry Blazer called ‘Learning to Walkabout’, which gets into these issues, particularly as it relates to how AI will impact it. AI is going to make navigating these invisible systems and dealing with both spiritual and material much more challenging.

There is a wonderful movie about the Stasi in East Germany called The Lives of Others. It was the best movie of the year several years back on The Solari Report. If you watch that movie, you see what it’s like to be under 24/7 surveillance – an experience that I’ve had.

We all have to envision the fact that we are under 24/7 surveillance by the equivalent of a Stasi team, but it is software bots and AI; it’s not physical people, but we are dealing with a highly intelligent, sophisticated system that has been evolving and being developed for decades. We all have the equivalent. It’s not only from the government; it’s from consumer companies trying to sell us and get us to behave in a variety of ways. So, that’s it for controlling us both in spiritual and material.

3. Control is top-down. At the end of the day, this system is run by physical force; it’s run by hardware, not software; it’s run by weapons, not by soft power.

I strongly recommend that you get our 3rd Quarter 2017 Wrap Up, Control 101. I wrote it because I was at a conference on bitcoin and cryptocurrencies, and I was struggling because everyone there ——— didn't seem to understand this very basic fundamental fact. They have all grown up in the middle class or upper middle-class bubble of America, and they didn't seem to understand that power comes out of a gun. They were making some pretty frightening mistakes that I think could literally cost them, not only a great deal of money, but in the worst case, it could cost them their lives.

I said, "I have to make another effort at explaining to The Solari Report subscribers how control really works." So, get Control 101, which is in the archives. I think that wrap up will be a tremendous help to you. If you don't have the hard copy, you can always go to the store and buy the hard copy.

4. Finance and mind control. Finance and mind control are preferred to physical force. So, any time the leadership can use money or mind control to basically manage and manipulate, it doesn't like to use force. The problem with force is this: If you think about sneaking up on a herd of animals and if they get nervous, they will stampede. So, you want to selectively target and kill individual members of the herd without the herd getting spooked. You want to stay invisible. So, finance and mind control are almost always preferred to physical force.

Finance has been a very important controlling system for centuries and centuries. If you go back to the secret societies, the secret societies for centuries have had the ability to do extensive mind control, but it was time intensive. When we tied the black budget up with the secret societies, we created the institutional capacity to take mind control to a whole new institutional level. That is one of the reasons I so appreciate the work by Truthstream Media. They are going back and explaining that history and documenting it. If you haven't watched their documentary, The Minds of Men, I can't recommend it highly enough.

It was the Documentary of the Year last year on The Solari Report.

Digital technology has allowed the leadership over the last three decades to really make mind control very economic, but take it global. They had to deliver it one by one through smartphones or computers or TVs. With the help of software and AI, they are able to manage everyone on a one by one basis; it doesn't have to be even by neighborhood. You can manage and manipulate every individual and every family in very granular ways. You need to know that capacity exists and it helps to understand it.

We did a great Solari Report on entrainment and mind control. My focus was on financial manipulation because I see many, many family budgets really harmed by entrainment being used to encourage them to do stupid financial deals, make stupid consumer purchases, get hooked on porn, get control files as a result of being hooked, and on and on and on.

The Solari Reports with Jon Rappoport are also helpful in this; 'The Matrix Revealed' and 'The Power of It'. Jon has a lot of information in his interview collection and his book, The Secret Behind Secret Societies, that are part of his 'Matrix Revealed' collection, which I find to be very useful.

We try to post and publish a lot of the Truthstream material because they have really made it their focus to 'out' this technology. Rather than duplicate their work, my goal is to simply support them in doing that and make sure that you are encouraged to have access.

My major tool in dealing with these kinds of systems that we are up against is the mathematics of time and money. I find that time and money and the math of time and money are extremely helpful in helping me understand what is happening and make sure that I am being productive and avoiding the traps.

That is it for Solari Report Resources. Let's turn to the deep state's goals:

III: Control System Goals

What is it that Mr. Global really wants? That is somewhat the mystery because we don't really know for sure who Mr. Global is. Clearly, control is the goal, but as part of that control there is always the desire for more profit. So you want to achieve control, but you want to do it in a way where you can harvest as much profit as possible for the system. Remember that now with digital technology, we are watching the systems go into place that you can institute and track and monitor that control and harvest one person at a time.

Imagine that each one of us has the equivalent of a Stasi team 24/7 on us. It's just AI and software. They are always trying to make money. The question is not always: How do I get to Rome? It is: How do I make money getting to Rome? I think it is very important to understand this idea of getting the victim to finance their own demise.

If you look at how much money is paid with operations financed by sovereign debt, you realize that it is the taxpayers' taxes and the taxpayers' credit that are being used to finance the control manipulation management and harvest of the taxpayers. It's important to understand that because, as we switch from humans to robotics to transhumanism, they are trying to flip the model from one where the individual is sovereign to the individual is literally a natural resource. For the United States and the commonwealth and the G7 nations, this is a very big change.

I have a couple of comments on the characteristics. Harvesting:

The deep state works through investment cartels and corporate monopolies. The corporations are important., but the investment cartels are much more important. A critical function within those investment cartels are the insurance operations because it is the management of risk that protects the equity that the investment cartels so care about.

You want to understand when you look at this as a hydraulic pumping system the pools of capital, and the cartels, the operators, and the corporations, and then the risk managers in the insurance.

There are aspects of this which are spiritual and energetic. The leadership wants to manipulate the crowd to create an intention to invest the world that they want as opposed to the one the crowd wants. That is one of the reasons mind control for management is, for them, such a blessing. Although you are beginning to wonder as you see more and more craziness in the leadership, if there is not a blowback that is making them crazy, too.

Clearly, they care tremendously about income and equity valuations. They are always trying to optimize income and equity value. That is not the goal; their goal is not to make money. They have all the money in the world, but their goal is to optimize the harvest subject to making sure that they have very, very tight control. So, risk is the driver, first and foremost, in a strategic vision of where they want to go; more than making money, but making money is very, very important.

Finally, much of what happens organizes around channels. You have a business. You have a county budget or a financial flow. That is your channel. You have a model of how things work. You want the money to go through your channel, so you see these competitions between whether the money is going to go through my channel or your channel.

One of the huge wars in America over the last 50 years is trying to get all the income to flow through big corporations that are publicly traded, instead of small business because small business creates equity for individuals in the community, as opposed to big corporations that can be controlled and managed at the top.

The more that you can get the income flowing out of the small businesses into the big corporations – which are publicly traded – the more the central control forces can control all of the equity. You want to understand the channel war whenever you are watching the battle for a dollar in what used to be a marketplace.

It's hard for some people to understand the extent to which every penny is warred over. I remember watching a presentation and hearing that Coca Cola's profit was a penny a bottle. Every penny is warred over because every penny counts, particularly in a highly-leveraged financial system. So, a penny profit – if you can lever it with publicly traded stock and derivatives and debt – can turn into a dollar very quickly in a leveraged system.

Moreover, in a highly centrally-controlled system, like in America, if you have 3,100 counties and are dealing drugs into every one except the unbelievably wealthy ones, you can't afford for any county to get out of the model because if one can do it, the rest can do it. It's hard to understand how extreme the attention is paid to every penny and to assure that there are no exceptions to the rule.

Let's look at several model characteristics that are worth understanding.

Number one, the leadership is constantly prototyping, especially in any period of high technological change.

So, they are always prototyping things

People say to me, “How can this be possible? What is going on?” They are prototyping. They are just trying things and are trying every possible combination.

You have to understand this is a leadership group that is always in the invention room. That is how it works, and that is how the economics lend itself to.

Number two, the secrecy is so extraordinary. We decided to make a whole world of things secret after World War II, and that secrecy has grown and grown and grown, and produced serious multiple personality disorder in the culture and in the finances. Secrecy is a major financial addiction, and it is a legal addiction. Once you build a whole company, and once you build a whole universe around secrecy, if you disclose and let it go, the legal liabilities and the brand liabilities and the reputation liabilities are enormous.

Also, the culture is very committed. You can see this as you work across the different lines. You have different worlds within this multiple personality disorder that are very committed to their own little bubble and not crossing the knowledge lines that have been laid down for them.

For example, if you try to talk to the financial people about the UFOs or the black budget, they have been trained derailment, and not to talk about black budget or UFOs. It’s amazing; it’s a deep cultural commitment; it must be mind control. They just won’t go there.

You can have $21 trillion missing from the Federal government, and they just won’t go there. Part of that is they can’t fathom they are —— — ‘out of the know’, and they don’t want to know that they are ‘out of the know’. Or, when you deal with the financial fraud people who know all about the black budget and the UFOs because they are engineering the financial fraud: I once said to a financial fraudster who had done financial fraud for ONI, “You are so clever at this! I could teach you how to make money legitimately.”

He got very upset, turned bright red, and was deeply insulted. He said, “I would never make money legitimately.”

It was as though his ‘penis would fall off’ or something (excuse me for being blunt). It would emasculate him if he had to do legitimate business. It was the strangest thing to see, but you could see that it is a deep, deep culture.

Another thing is that much of what happens organizes around incentive systems. As I said earlier, the people who run things don’t ask, “How do we go to Rome?” They say, “How do we make money going to Rome?” That is why controlling the Federal credit is so important. You can engineer; you can take any function or strategic direction and make it financially attractive to the general population to go there. If you look at the Federal budget and the Federal finances, they are all engineered to create thousands and thousands of carrots and sticks that get people headed towards Rome and not headed towards Paris. It is very much an engineering incentive system. That is one of the things that I tried to describe in the Dillon Read story.

You could take a highly uneconomic and economically insane activity – private prisons – which makes absolutely no financial sense, and make it look like it was a highly economic activity and people could make plenty of money engineering it for you because that is what you wanted to do.

So, the taxpayer pays extraordinary amounts of money, and Katie Graham and her friends get to make a lot of money on DC real estate gentrification.

Now I'm going to focus primarily on the US. Always make your victim finance your attack on them. This is the whole idea of the leveraged buyout; whether it's a leveraged buyout of a company, a country, or a neighborhood. You want your country to finance your taking them over. You want the victim to finance the attack against them. That is why taxpayer funding is so important. It's why I get so frustrated when I see people banking at JP Morgan Chase or buying Treasury securities. You are betting against yourself.

There is a multiple personality disorder in the general population about where they are choosing to put their money voluntarily and how it connects to the things that they say they hate. If you hate that being done to you, why are you financing and providing the resources so that it can be done to you? Why are you doing that?

Another model characteristic that is very important to understand is that we are in the process of switching from markets and democratic process to technocracy. It's why I was so glad that Patrick Wood was available to do the interview on technocracy, and I recommend his books on technocracy. AI software and digital communications, combined with mind control, make it easier for the leadership to run things through technocracy and just simply leave markets and democracy behind, although they make a big 'yakety-yak' about all that.

This is a system which is phenomenally wasteful, but it is very efficient for tight control of capital resources. If you are a small business — — dealing with the implementation of technocracy or an individual just wildly frustrated about it, you need to know that this is a plan, this is real, and there is a logic to it. I think that Wood and his books can help you a great deal on that score.

Finally, the thing which I think is hardest for the general population to understand is that the system works. It is working. It is working for its real goals, and it is working for the people who run it.

Whenever they passed a bill in DC, we would simply invert the meaning of the name, and that is how we would know what the bill was about. So, if the bill says “The freedom of liberty for all’ then the bill is really about how we control everybody down to the sub-molecular level.

However, the system is working for its real goals, and that is what you need to see. Many people fall into the trap of saying, “Oh, the system isn’t working, and I am going to work really hard and fix it,” and, “I am going to save the planet, etc.”

What they don’t understand is that all the reasons you think the system isn’t working are simply an air cover discussion. The system actually is working perfectly for where the centralizers want to go. That’s not to say that it’s not organic; it is very organic and you have competition and cooperation between all sorts of people in factions. To a certain extent, that is what I am counting on. I am counting on the Midianite thing saving us all. If you don’t understand what I mean about that, check out my recent Solari Report interview with Thomas Meyer on the story of Gideon.

This is why it is essential to see the invisible systems and techniques – the infowars, the economic warfare, and all this. So much of the system is succeeding while pretending that it's not working. "Oh, DOD isn't able to keep good accounts because it's too complicated and they made a mistake and it's not working." Nonsense! It is working perfectly! They have been spinning that yarn for 30 years straight! Do you think they can't run clean books at DOD? Of course they can.

It's critical that they can pick the herd off one by one before the whole herd realizes what is really happening and starts to stampede against the leadership.

One of my favorite books that informs real solutions that I have talked about many times before is The Evolution of Cooperation by Axelrod, and he explains why transparency is so important. In fact, the human race will shun that which is psychopathic or unhealthy if they can see it. Transparency can shift the whole dynamic, and that is why we at Solari are so committed. We think that transparency really helps you and us in the world lead a free and inspired life.

Let's look at the goal of the system at the tactical level – at the level of you and your family or of an individual. There are two things. When you are in a competition or in a war to control and harvest somebody, you want to diminish a whole series of their strengths, and then you want to increase a whole series of their burdens.

These are the micro-goals of the system, and you need to think about it at this level. So, I am going to talk about the things they want to diminish vis-a-vis you or me, and the things that the system is designed to increase.

A. First, they want to drain your energy, your power, and your resources – anything that makes you powerful and independent, but preferably in a way that makes money for them and makes them look like a winner. Remember, you need to look like a loser, and they need to look like a winner.

They want to diminish your faith, your hope, and your love. If you have not yet, listen to 'The Solari Report, 'Learning to Walkabout' or 'The Matrix Revealed'. If I can invent my own future, then they can't invent my future for me. But remember, since they want my energy to go through their channel, they don't want me inventing my future; they want me making money for their future, for the future that they have planned for the system.

B. They want to diminish health. Go back to the scene in Gladiator. They want to handicap the gladiator with poison so that they can beat him because they can't beat him 'fair and square'.

C. It's important that they look like a winner, so secret handicaps are very, very important to do that. With AI there are infinite possibilities of how to do that. Remember, insiders don't get junk mail.

D. Diminish the brand. They want to diminish brands. Once again, look at the scene in Gladiator. Before he can kill you, he must kill your name.

I once had an investment manager tell me that 35% of the value of a consumer stock came from the value of the brand. So, it's very, very important that the general population not be allowed to build up a powerful brand that contradicts or stops the flow from going through their channel.

E. Diminish media attention. It was very interesting. After I had a perfectly dreadful experience with the New York Times when I worked in the Bush Administration, and then when I was dealing with the litigation, I really ‘got done dirty’ by the Washington Post. When it happened I said, “I am never dealing with corporate media again. From now on if somebody has a question for me, I am going to answer it directly. I want nothing to do with corporate media. They have no integrity. I’ve had it.”

It was one of the smartest decisions I ever made. It never occurred to me that I would end up being a member of the independent media as a result, but the reality is that there is no point in communicating with or through anybody who doesn’t have integrity.

What is interesting is if you have seen how many people, reporters, experts who I saw destroyed because they kept trying to work through corporate, they hungered for the attention and the credibility of corporate media. They were willing to allow perfectly intelligent, capable, honest people be destroyed because corporate media did their fake news smear on them.

The tapeworm does not want the individual to be able to access media and get attention and get their brand built by media unless they are pushing more energy through their channel.

F. Diminish intellectual capital. The way that you win wars is through intelligence. It’s remarkable how much the general population underestimates the value of good intelligence. I grew up in a world where valuable intelligence was seen as the primary competitive advantage. Access to information intelligence was critical. It’s another reason secrecy is so very, very profitable.

When Hamilton was targeted, and I had to shut it down, they required that we turn over 100% of all our digital databases and systems and software, and they picked it dry. One of the competitors was paid by the Department of Justice to be the litigation contractor. If you saw how they stripped and use the people, the software, the ideas, the contracts, the relationships - they picked all of our assets and our intellectual capital clean; it was amazing.

It took me six years to get our most valuable software from court control, and when I finally got it back, the most valuable parts were gone; they had stolen them. It wasn't even subtle.

If you ever study the manipulation of the patent system, it's unbelievable how they are able to diminish other people's intellectual capital to their own benefit. This goes on in little and big ways.

One of my funniest stories is when I was sitting in my office in 1998 with my attorney. This is when we were dealing with the Hamilton litigation. There was a woman who was very high-up in strategic planning at the CIA in Langley. She sent me a speech that George W. Bush had given as Governor of Texas about education. It was clear that the CIA was backing this man for President. For some reason they were positioning him as the education President.

She wanted to know what I thought of the speech. I wrote back and said, "This is terrible," not realizing that she had probably written it for him.

She wrote back in a huff and said, "Why? What would you have said?"

So, I wrote this long email with many paragraphs. I said, “If I wanted to be the ‘education President’ I would say this, this, this, and this.” I laid it all out.

Several weeks later my lawyer was reading the Wall Street Journal, and she said, “Oh my God! I think you had better look at this new speech from Bush on education.”

I looked at the paper, and it had long quotes in it. There was a whole paragraph lifted from my speech. I said to my attorney, Caroline, “Did I get paid for this?”

I can’t tell you how many times I was asked to do a short spot on a breaking news event on the radio, and the next day I would look at Yahoo Bloomberg, and sure enough, essentially there is what I said or some variation of it rolling out. It’s all part of getting people like me to help craft the system for free. I think they get many people that they attract to figure out how they want to spin different things.

At Dillon Read or at Hamilton Securities, I had an unbelievable analytical infrastructure. If you look at the analytical infrastructure I was building at Hamilton, it was amazing. It gave me the capacity to look at markets and money globally in very, very powerful ways connected to what was happening on the ground in neighborhoods or politically. If I wasn’t losing $100,000 a year to the skim of low-grade harassment and shadow work, that is exactly where that money would go; it would go into the analytical infrastructure.

I suspect that the reason it was being siphoned off is because part of economic warfare is making sure that my ability to create that analytical infrastructure is diminished. Diminished networks. You want to lower people's access to the kind of people and organizations that can really leverage what they're doing through cooperation. Every time I got into a corporate situation or a board room, and people started to ask me questions and I opened my mouth, you would be amazed at the speed at which they got excited and started learning and the control networks got nervous.

Every effort is being made to keep me from necessarily getting into those situations with some exceptions.

G. Diminished social prestige. This is a very important area because social prestige is of great importance to most people. What is amazing is that you can use prestige as an incentive or a control incentive, and you can use it to manipulate people, and it's free. So rather than pay somebody money, if you can pay them with social prestige, it's great if you are the tapeworm because you don't care. You are busy running the world. But if you can create highly complex little hierarchies filled with little steps up the ladder and get everybody jockeying and fighting for those little steps and get them paid off with those little steps, you can save a lot of money and keep very, very tight control.

It is remarkable how important social prestige is to the general population. It's almost frightening.

One of the stories that I tell in Narco-Dollars for Beginners is about being at a Christian revival in Atlanta. It was in 2000 during the elections. George W. Bush appears on a big monitor to speak to the crowd and 100,000 African-American women jump up cheering for Bush.

I was studying with a pastor and was teaching my spiritual warfare class. She had worked at DEA, and there was nothing about Clinton or Bush family narcotics trafficking she didn't know. In fact, one of her children had just been shot at in a drive-by shooting the week before.

She jumped up cheering for Bush. Afterwards I said to her, "Patricia, I just lost my fortune and almost lost my life trying to stop Bush and Clinton family narcotics trafficking, and you jumped up and cheered for him?"

She looked at me and said, "Yes, but he is a winner and you are a loser."

So, we are in a system where you are admired if you are a winner, and you are a winner if you make money for the tapeworm. So, there you have it; so much for being a Christian.

H. Diminished access to relationships. We all get tremendous energy from being married, from having a boyfriend or a girlfriend or children and relationships, and community and sex. Concerning all these different forms of relationships, you want to make it impossible for people to get any of them unless they win the treats of the tapeworm. So, you want to hand out money and social prestige in a way that is their channel to access to all these things.

If they don't play ball, you want to diminish their access to relationships.

I. Diminish culture. You want to diminish access to the divine mind; to the higher mind and divine intelligence. If you don't understand morphogenic field, I strongly recommend you explore the work of Rupert Sheldrake and read The Field by Lynne McTaggart.

I was very reticent to talk openly about morphogenic fields because intuitively, I absolutely believed that it was a theory that explained what I had seen regarding behavior and politics and in local economies. So, I really came to believe in morphogenic fields. But it wasn't until I lived through the physical harassment that I realized if you reverse engineer what they were doing to me, and why they were doing it to me, it was clear that they believed in morphogenic fields, and that we share intelligence in electromagnetic fields. They kept trying to cut me off from the field and make sure that I had no real power in the field.

If you get to know any of the targeted individuals, you realize that these are people who are not powerful in the media, but the media is fake. These are people who have real power in the field, and they want to make sure that they are manipulating and controlling in the power of the field. If they don't, this whole fake system of media and status and social prestige won't give them the control and the ability to herd everybody to their channels.

J. They want to diminish income. They want to lower or extinguish your ability to create income other than going through their channels. It's not just income; it's the ability to diminish access and raise the cost of capital.

The source of inequality in this society is the arbitrage between a zero percent cost of capital for the people who control the money system and all of us who are paying 20-30% on our credit cards. That is an enormous arbitrage, and it has nothing to do with real economics; it has to do with control. That includes when it comes to cost of capital not being able to leverage.

If I have a small business, my price-earnings ratio is ‘one’, because my equity is not liquid and it can’t multiply out. (I shouldn’t say ‘one’ because some small businesses can get PE’s up to five or six.) If you look at the PE of Merck, the last time that I looked it was 50 times earnings. You cannot get that kind of price-earnings ratio unless you can access the liquid markets.

Part of diminishing income and access to capital is diminishing the ability to lever your equity into very powerful price-earnings ratios.

K. Diminish assets. I can’t tell you how many wars I’ve had in my life on how big my house was. They want to diminish house, real estate, art, furniture, and anything that gives you value and protects you against inflation and gives you a sense of security in this world.

Right now, we are in a big push to consolidate ownership and control of real estate and land, including farm land. If you look at the dirty techniques being used to do that, they are significant. So, diminishing assets in a way that generates big, big assets for the other team is definitely one of the diminishments.

L. Finally, diminish the rights to the enforcement and law. Another part of the big arbitrage, in addition to the cost of capital or access to intelligence, is diminishing the right of the law to protect you. On one hand, you have leadership.

Jack Kemp once said to me, “The law? The law? I don’t have to obey the law! I report to a higher moral authority.”

So basically, he was saying that he could operate above the law, whereas we all have to be perfect in our compliance and regulation and dealing with much more enforcement.

Those are the diminishment. Their tactics are to diminish you in all these different ways. Their other set of tactics is to increase.

A. So, the first and most important thing is time. I said there is an arbitrage in the cost of capital; there is an arbitrage in the compliance with the law. There is a major arbitrage in the time and productivity – the time it takes to get anything done.

The further down the ladder you are, or concerning insider/outsider, the further outside you are, the more time things take and the harder it is for your phones to work and the harder it is for your computer systems and printers to work.

There is an endless spectrum of all the different things that are done to change the productivity of the insider versus the productivity of the outsider.

Remember, again back to the gladiator, the goal is to make it look like they are the winners and the outsiders are the losers as if it was a fundamental fair fight. If you look at how the shadow work is engineered, it's not a fair fight. They spend a lot of our money engineering shadow work for us.

B. Risk. I once said that real inflation was that tuna can cost 25% more, it's 25% smaller, and there is a 25% greater chance that you are going to get food poisoning. There is a real debasement of quality control and attention to risk management that protects the general population.

I did a review about six months ago about China Rx, which describes the sourcing of more and more ingredients in pharmaceuticals from China. One of the reasons it's done is because those things can be made in China without the kind of quality control or standards that we have here. Of course, not surprisingly, people are dying as a result of ingesting some of these ingredients.

Our risk increases as more and more corners are cut regarding quality control and other attention to risk management.

C. Our expenses increase. We have our credit attacked, we have our prices raised, we get cut off from various systems, and they drain resources. As for me, they drain $100,000 of shadow work in extra compliance a year.

The more you have artificial intelligence and software, there are literally millions and millions of ways of engineering these kinds of differences and expenses.

AT&T blocked Solari for 15 months, so anyone with an AT&T-related domain, we could not email any subscriber who signed up with an AT&T email. Now AT&T has just informed us after 15 months that they have taken us off their block with no explanation as to why. So whatever you do, please don't use an AT&T email, particularly with Solari. What was done for 15 months until last week, can be done again.

When that happened, I put out a recommendation to subscribers, and I also wrote a piece about Marsha Blackburn. One thing I pointed out in Hickory Valley for myself and my assistant, is that Solari pays —— $15,000 a year for phone and internet service because we need so much redundancy.

It is inconceivable to me that in an intelligent world, we should have to pay more than $2,000 a year for what we are getting. I have to tell you that if you look at the quality of what we are getting, it is dreadful. But the money goes to redundancy and the redundancy is because we can't afford to not be online and not be able to access or communicate when we need to, including it being a safety issue. Nevertheless, it is very, very expensive. I'm sure that if I was still an insider, I would be clocking along paying $2,000 a year.

D. Finally, raise the cost of capital. It's not only the interest rate that you pay, but your ability to lever your equity into capital gains by having higher and higher price-earnings ratios, which relate both to cost of capital and access to markets and risk management. If you have a big target on your brand, there is no way that you are going to be able to access that kind of liquidity and higher PE's.

Those are the lists. Remember at the tactical level, we are talking about a system that is trying to diminish your strengths in all these different areas and to increase your expenses. But in every single one of these items that I have gone through, remember their goal is not to diminish or increase; their goal is to diminish or increase in a way that makes them money and improves their control.

So with the student loans, they are not looking to bankrupt a generation; they are looking to bankrupt a generation in a way that makes them money. "Ask not: How do I go to Rome; Ask: How do I make money going to Rome?"

That completes Part III Control System Goals.

Now let's turn to the 'nitty-gritty':

IV. Tactics by Areas.

I have sixteen areas that I want to cover. There is a lot of overlap, and I am going to err on the side of redundancy. Rarely do you get one tactic used on you; they usually come in combinations.

A. Faith, Hope, and Love. Our first tactic area is one that I have talked much about on The Solari Report. I will define it as 'Faith, Hope, & Love'. It is an expression that comes from Corinthians in the Bible, "Now abideth faith, hope, and charity [love]."

I have covered this in 'Learning to Walkabout' and I have also covered it in the 'Spiritual Warfare' and 'The Power of It' with Jon Rappoport. I would really encourage you to listen to 'Learning to Walkabout' because it's extremely important to me and my dealing with the Faith, Hope, & Love aspect. One of my favorite preachers says, "Your power comes from your love," and you can't lose your love. That was the big question for me when I was so immersed in the physical harassment and the legal and financial harassment and the smear, and on and on.

How could I persevere through this and not lose my love? I didn't want to lose my love. Part of the problem was that I had to face the fact that essentially, the people I cared the most about in the world had set me up.

You have to face the fact that the people who you thought you loved were killing you, and you have to fight them in a way that you win —

— but you don't lose your love. If you lose your love, it's not a win.

It's something that I've thought a great deal about. One of my favorite quotes is from Jon Rappoport. He says, "Hopelessness is an op, and it's planet-wide."

At the root of spiritual warfare in the situation that we are dealing with is the essentiality of getting you to give up and get on the hamster wheel and make money for the man or die. It is really spiritual warfare. We have souls, and our souls are immortal. The game is not to allow your immortal soul to be compromised and certainly not allow it to be compromised only to make money for the tapeworm.

Evil is a force and it moves through events, it moves through people, and the goal of spiritual warfare is to separate the people from the evil, thus defeating the evil and not to end up in a war with the people. That is how evil wins.

As you try not to lose your love and you nurture your love, it's important to understand that there really are allies everywhere. Your allies can only do what they can do; they can't necessarily go to the wall for you; they have other obligations such as families. So, you don't want to be putting people in double-binds, and you want to appreciate them for what they can do.

I am going to talk about all these different tactics, describing the evil that men do. Remember that for every evil person that does you wrong, in my experience there are more than a few good people who can build it back up.

The other thing that is critically important is if you want to remain powerful, you have to take responsibility for what is happening. Life is difficult; life is unfair. That is one of the great truths. Power comes from taking responsibility and respecting and upholding the law and respecting the rights of other humans and conducting yourself according to the principles of human civilization, even when many of the people around you are not treating you in that way.

Bad behavior by others is not excused, condoned, or justified behavior by you because that is where your power comes from. It comes from taking responsibility and being the kind of law that we want to see in this world and being the kind of civilization that we want to see in this world.

So, area number one is Faith, Hope, & Love. This is spiritual warfare, and your number one responsibility is to nurture and protect your faith, hope, and love no matter what the cost.

One of my favorite lines from scripture is, “Guard your heart, for from it comes the wellspring of life.” That is the case.

B. Health. First let me talk about the health targeting of the general population because we are all dealing with a targeting of the general population, and it is hitting everyone – unless you are one of the favored few who can escape it.

Number one in my opinion, is the suppression of natural cures. There is an enormous amount of knowledge and information about how to care for ourselves economically at very little expense with natural and alternative methods, and most people don’t know about them.

The critical thing is that you need to know about them before you need them.

It's one of the reasons we have a Wellness Series on The Solari Report, and it's one of the reasons we talk a lot about health. I was really stunned as an investment advisor to discover that the number one cause of loss of financial wealth by my clients was health problems. I was always stunned when I would hear their stories. When somebody who has millions of dollars in a brokerage account says, "I can't afford organic food," I say, "Honey, you cannot afford not to eat organic food."

You need to make sure that your number one investment priority is investing proactively in great food, great nutrition, and doing whatever you need to do to stay healthy.

I once figured out if I hadn't done Hamilton Securities and if I had just put money into what I thought was going to go up in the stock market, I would be worth $39 million today. I did the calculation and told somebody this, and they said, "Yes, but you would be dead."

I realized that is true. It's through this process of being thrown out of the establishment and wandering around in the wilderness and then being a member of independent media that I had access to a huge amount of healthcare information that people in the establishment – at my level – don't normally have. In fact, it did save my life.

I will say it again: Please be careful about GMO foods and pesticides. Do anything that you can do to provide for good quality food.

The deterioration in the food supply from 1996 on is amazing. If you ever watched Robyn O'Brien, she has done a very good job of documenting from the mid 1990's on the extraordinary deterioration in the food supply.

In regard to pharmaceuticals, there clearly is an amazing effort to promote enormous amounts of pharmaceuticals on the population. I just published a video which I hadn't seen before. It's old; it's from 2012, and it's by Dr. Randy Tent who is a chiropractor near Detroit. It describes the enormous deterioration in our immune systems, but also the use of pharmaceuticals that further entraps us and spirals us down. It's very good.

Clearly, the effort to get us all hooked and onto pharmaceuticals is one of the things that is doing tremendous damage to the health and the controllability of the general population. If you are weak and sick, you are much easier to control.

Another problem for the general population in the health area is the failure to maintain the infrastructure. It's one of the reasons if you are moving, and you are looking for a new house, you really want to pay attention to what the water and sewer systems and other infrastructure systems are like. If you just bought a house in Flint, Michigan, it is very, very expensive to your health and your pocketbook.

The quality of water is very important. If you look at the fluoride and the effort by corporations to buy up the water supply, – whether it's an infrastructure problem like Flint, Michigan or the chemicals that they are putting in the water or the way the water supply is being shifted and moved around – the quality of water is another assault on the general population health.

Air pollution and global spraying is another area. If you haven't discovered Clifford Carnicom's mega blockbuster Solari Report that we did in 2010, it's still fresh and contains amazing information.

Then we did an interview with Dr. Gwen Scott on what spraying does to your health and what to do about it.

Anybody who has been with The Solari Report for any period of time knows that I am extremely concerned about vaccine injury. Part of it is that in 2007 I started to do individual investment advisory, which I did for 11 years. Many of my first clients are people who had come to me because their children had been injured by vaccines. After dealing with the healthcare system, they realized, "Oh my God! If the lies are this big in healthcare, what is going on in finance? I need to worry about my money."

I ended up with all sorts of families and experts related to vaccine injury and autism, and I learned plenty about the best sources. If you do a search on our website, you will pick up more information on this. One thing that I did was batched up the resources – the best sources – on vaccines.

One of the things that you will see coming out of a vaccine injury is the financial destruction of a family. One mother in Vaxxed estimated that a heavily autistic child will cost a family – at present value - $5 million. The question is: Who is going to pay?

I often say to people who are grandparents that say, "My child wants to vaccinate my grandchildren, and there is nothing that I can do. It's not my business," and I say to them, "It is your business because you are going to be the bank. Your kids don't have that much money, but you do. And guess who is going to be the bank? It is going to be your business because you will be the bank whether they admit it or not."

Addiction is a major strategy for the system. It is unbelievably profitable to get people addicted to drugs, to alcohol, to sex, and to pornography. It can lead to getting control files on people. It is very, very profitable just to sell it, but also to then use it to control.

There are real dangers of being around an addicted population. How many people know somebody who has been hurt in a car accident by a drunk or drugged driver? It's very common. The risks and harms from addiction spreads around the population.

EMF radiation is another one. These are the side effects of the world's most invasive surveillance systems. We have more and more understanding of that now. If anything, it is going the wrong way, and it is getting worse with 5G.

A big one in the United States is to deny access to healthcare services. To use the insurance system, expense is manipulated upward to deny access.

Health mandates, including now forced vaccinations are next. There is a real effort to mandate things which, in my opinion, are extremely harmful to the health of the general population.

Codex and food nutritional standards are another. We have had several interviews with Scott Tips of the National Health Federation, which elaborated on that.

One of the more gruesome things, which I don't talk about much, is involuntary chipping. I think that the covert operations to get people chipped without their knowledge, including material —— that is in the spray that creates the equivalent of organic bar chips or particles in your body that make you receptive to digital communications, is part of my question: What is in the vaccines that can make it easier to mind control you? That is part of the problem.

Then, of course, herding populations into the city is something that we addressed in our Megacities discussion in the 3rd Quarter Wrap Up.

If you move people to living on cement, you cut them off from the sun and nature and cut them off from their neighbors, which is more likely to happen in dense living. They become much easier to manipulate and control and to get them to buy into a false picture of reality and into the official reality.

Obviously, mind control is a big problem to health because mind control can definitely encourage people to behave in ways which are bad for their health. Needless to say, if you don't have your mind, you are not healthy.

Those are some of the items for the general population that are hitting all of us. I'm sure there are more that I have forgotten to mention. The Solari Report subscribers are unbelievably intelligent and understand many of the different issues that are affecting us. I'm sure that you will come up with more.

Let's talk about selected targeting now because there is no doubt that one of the great ways of targeting a person who is not doing what the establishment wants is to manipulate them in a way that diminishes their health. This is a big one.

The first thing that we see are lists on the internet of natural healthcare practitioners who were destroyed or killed off. So, there is real targeting. The question is: Who is doing this? I doubt that it is the government. It is probably private companies. These people are spreading knowledge that can be very destructive to the profitability of publicly-traded farm and healthcare stocks.

If you are going to have an economic and independent free and inspired life, having excellently healthcare practitioners is very important. So, getting rid of these people is clearly one of the ways that you target the health of the general population.

Entrapment healthcare is next. I can't tell you how much healthcare tries to get you on drugs and to do things which are not in your best interest.

It's ironic. I went to a doctor in California. I wanted to talk to somebody about what I should do about doing some bioidentical hormones or something similar. I was working, and had a business in California. It was very uncharacteristic of me, and I got very tired.

I did a lot of research and made sure that the doctor I was going to see had very good recommendations. She was in Santa Cruz.

I went to see her, and have never met a more uptight person. She was so uptight that it was strange; it was bizarre. She started to take my history, and then said, "Are you depressed?"

I said, "No. I'm tired, but I'm not depressed. I'm generally a pretty happy person. I don't get depressed."

This went on for another minute, and she asked again, “Are you depressed?”

I said, “No, I told you I’m not depressed. I’m a bit tired.”

This went on for 20 minutes. She asked me eight times (I counted them), and after the eighth time I said, “Look, lady. I am not depressed. Are you depressed?”, because she was acting like something very strange was going on. In retrospect, I think she had been threatened and told to get me on the record saying that I was depressed and to get me on drugs. It was a set-up and I think that somebody got to her.

If you look at her recommendations, her behavior was extremely bizarre. She was clearly scared of something and it was very weird.

I’ve dealt with people when they have been threatened or blackmailed, and she was behaving like one of them. But after the eighth time, I stopped calling her ‘doctor’ and started calling her ‘lady’. “Look, lady. I’m not depressed.”

In retrospect, I should have walked out of the office because she was clearly not a sincere healthcare practitioner. She may have been trying to get me on depression drugs because she was getting kickbacks from the pharmaceutical companies, which believe me, between the schools and the doctors, there is enormous pressure from the insurance companies and pharmaceuticals to get everybody on these drugs.

I had a doctor in Washington tell me that I had to go on drugs because of the litigation. I said, “No, I need my head clear.” The last thing that I need to be doing is taking drugs.

She said, “What is your goal in this thing?”

I said, “My goal is to win the litigation and go back to doing what I can do to make the Popsicle Index go up,” and she said, “Oh, there is nothing that you can do to make the Popsicle Index go up. It’s all hopeless.”

She was very depressed. I said, “Well, I don’t believe that. I don’t believe it’s hopeless. I’m happier doing the best that I can to not believe it’s hopeless.”

She said, “No, it’s hopeless. You have to take drugs.”

I said, “Really? You’re a doctor? You’re here to make people healthy?”

So, you get into these weird situations where you have doctors who are so miserable and so depressed. Basically, their job is to push depression and push drugs and push mind control.

During the litigation I would never go to the doctors. That was the last doctor I saw. I found so much interference and bizarre behavior. So I just said, “I can’t go.”

My father was a very famous surgeon. Because of my father, I knew a lot about the covert ways that hospitals and doctors are used, including using elective surgery to kill people. If you read Mary’s Mosaic or The History of Al Carone you will read stories of people’s children being warned about this. I think it was Al Carone’s daughter and then a mafia person teaching his daughter in Mary’s Mosaic that one of the best cover stories for killing people and assassinating them is getting them into elective surgery and then ‘offing’ them.

I had been trained in the risks of dealing with doctors and hospitals, and I had also been trained in the risks of letting doctors keep records on you and then using those records to say that you were not mentally stable or to say ‘this or that’.

It’s interesting. During the litigation – and still to this day – if somebody asks me to fill out a form and it asks for my doctor’s name, I say, “None.” I do that with all professionals because I don’t want those professionals to be threatened or blackmailed into trying to get me to do something or to do something vis-à-vis me.

My feeling is: If you have a problem with me, you’re going to have to deal with me directly, not squeeze these other people. That’s why I would never go to doctors during the litigation because I knew it was dangerous.

It was interesting because it forced me to learn how to do everything that I could with natural cures and remedies. I ended up researching and reading and learning a huge amount. The other thing that I learned to my shock and amazement – and this was something that my father had taught me, but it is hard to believe until you do it – is that the body really can heal itself. If you give the body what it needs with sleep and water and nutrition and a variety of other things that it needs to heal itself, it really will. I can’t tell you how many situations I was in where I figured, “Okay, I am definitely going to die,” and my body would heal itself. It was really miraculous.

I finally learned not to be so quick to see a doctor unless I needed antibiotics. Then I would see the nurse practitioner. “Give me those big, pink antibiotics!”

Poisoning is next. Poisoning for me was a major tactic. I've been poisoned at least eight to twelve occasions that I know of. Poisoning is a much more common tactic than most people realize, and it's used for different kinds of purposes.

I was poisoned because they tried to bust a deal that I was in the process of closing. I was due a $500,000 fee. I think they thought that if they could get me into bed and keep me there, they could get out of the deal and bust the fee.

Poisoning can kill a meeting. I remember going to CalPERS once for a meeting, and suddenly I mysteriously got food poisoning the night before and I couldn't go to the meeting. I just assumed that it was food poisoning, but I think that was to make sure that I couldn't go to the meeting. There was another person who then controlled the meeting that, in retrospect, was not in alignment with my goals.

That happened to me again for a meeting in New Hampshire about six years ago. It was the same kind of miraculous illness. It's always astonishing to me how if they want to bust up a meeting how many tactics they have to do it. Poison is definitely one.

Another reason for poison is to scare you. The first time I was poisoned with arsenic, it scared me to death because I had brown spots all over my body that were growing. You can actually see them growing in the mirror. I felt as though Dustin Hoffman with his biohazard suit was going to walk in at any moment. I felt like I was in the middle of a movie and it really scared me. Even though I had been poisoned before, I had never been poisoned in a way that was that physically evident.

Clearly, poisoning slows you down. I once again go back to the Gladiator movie. The Emperor sticks the gladiator with poison so that once he gets in the ring he can be defeated, and it looks like the gladiator is the loser and the Emperor is the winner. So, much of this was to slow me down, exhaust me, and make me not effective in the litigation or when we went to trial.

One of the big reasons was to get me to settle. When they were trying to settle, the lawyers all wanted their fees, and I was holding out. I think the theory was that if they made me sick I would just give up, and get tired and go away.

It's amazing how much poisoning can really slow down your metabolism and get your brain to the point where you cannot think. It's an amazing experience to go through.

I went through a very radical detox when the litigation was over, and I will never forget calling Dr. Laura Thompson. I did my 24-hour heavy metals test, and the normal lead content is 1.5 times. Above 1.5 in this particular heavy metal test, which is a 24-hour urine test, means that you are heavy on lead. I was 47.

She called me. Apparently she had an industrial worker who had worked his entire life with lead, and she said that he was 17. She said, "I didn't know that anybody could be 47 and still be alive."

She said to me, "Can you walk?"

I said, "Yes, I just got back from the gym."

She said, "I have no idea how you do it."

I said, “Whatever.”

I always wondered about that. If they didn’t have permission from the committee to shoot me with lead bullets, they figured, “We will kill her with lead.”

Needless to say, by the time I was at that 47 level, it was very difficult to concentrate and deal with complex information, so I detoxed. The last time that I did a test I was down to a 5. I should have kept on going, but it’s very draining to detox.

The difference between my mental acuity and functionality at 47 versus 5 is night and day. It’s like coming alive again. It’s very interesting because I drive throughout the country, and I see people. What I realize is that Americans are being poisoned and they don’t know it. Their toxicity levels are going up, up, up, and it’s slow, it’s sneaky, and that is why, if you get on Solari, you will find several interviews that we did with Dr. Laura Thompson on detox. I have to tell you that all of us have to detox, detox, detox. The benefits of detoxing are amazing. Whether or not you’ve been poisoned as a targeted individual, we are all being poisoned in general.

Finally, the last big poisoning was right after I wrote a letter to Condoleezza Rice, who was very famous at the time, on 9/11. Condoleezza Rice had testified in front of the commission on 9/11, and I believe that she had lied.

I remember Kelly O’Meara, who was a great reporter at Insight Magazine, calling and screaming at me. She said, “You have to write a letter! You have to do something!”

I said, “Why is it my job to do something?”

There were four wives of people who had been killed at the World Trade Center that were called ‘The Jersey Girls’. They were very talented, capable, amazing women. They did an interview, and I watched it on TV through the internet (because I don’t have a TV), and you could see that their lawyers had them tied up in knots. You couldn’t understand what they were saying. It didn’t make any sense and you could tell that their lawyers put them in a corner.

I said, “Fine. I will write a letter.”

I wrote a letter, and published it, and then it was picked up by WorldNet Daily, and then by Rense.com, and it just ‘rocketed’ through the internet.

A reporter from UPI called me on Monday and said, “I want to publish an article in UPI Top Picks about your letter.”

I said, “Don’t be ridiculous. Your editor is never going to let you put a link in UPI Top Picks, which goes to every one of the Congressional offices and all the Administration offices. They are never going to let you put a link to my letter in Top Picks.”

He said, “Oh, yes he is. We are going to position it as a ‘He said/She said’. It is basically a catfight between two Bush appointees squabbling. You are a Bush appointee, and Condoleezza Rice is a Bush appointee.”

I said, “Why would a UPI Washington editor allow you to put a link to my letter in UPI Top Picks?”

He said, “Because we hate Condoleezza Rice!”

Anyway, he did. The thing which had rocketed through the internet then totally ‘rocketed’. I had pretty good software at the time, and for the next two days Halliburton, which Vice President Cheney had run, was the number one user on our website. The day after that, I was poisoned, and I think that I almost died. Who knows? There was no doctor to certify that, but I slept for three days and drank massive amounts of water. When I woke up, I was 30-40 pounds heavier. It was quite a remarkable experience.

Right after that 3-day period when I woke up, the Supreme Court announced that it had essentially sided with Cheney on keeping the task force information related to the energy task force quiet. I think that one of the reasons the poisoning happened was because of that. If the court case had gone the other way, it would have made Cheney very, very vulnerable on 9/11.

After the litigation was over, I had someone I knew – a contact – who did covert operations for the Department of Justice. When I was trying to detox, we knew about the lead and we knew about the arsenic and some of the other poisons, but we couldn’t figure out what the other poisoning was.

We did many different testings’, which was very expensive. Finally, I called up this person and I said, “Look, do me a favor. No bad feelings. I’m just trying to get this poison out. Could you call your contact and find out from the Department of Justice what was in that last poisoning so now that the fight is over, I can get it out?”

He called me back the next week and said, “It wasn’t us. We think it was Halliburton.”

Who knows if that was true, but I thought that was a remarkable coincidence.

Poisoning is a major tactic. It's a tactic to slow you down, to kill a fee, to kill a meeting, for different legal situations, and just to make you easier to control and make it harder for you to think. There are thousands of different applications, and there are thousands of different ways of getting it into your body. It's rather shocking to me.

One of the things that I am convinced of that makes life tricky here in Hickory Valley is one of the reasons I moved from Washington. I discovered, however, that many of the people who do covert ops for the major agencies or contractors don't like to come all the way to places like Hickory Valley, so they get the locals to do it.

There have been more than a few strange situations. I have a good guess as to who the local stringers are who they got to put arsenic down my well – or whatever way it was done.

One of the peculiar ways that they pay back local people for doing any variety of covert tasks is with HUD properties. One of many different mechanisms to do it is when they take the foreclosed properties to auction, they just arrange for no one else to bid. So, the person who is to be 'paid back' is allowed to bid significantly below market and to pick up the property.

Let's say that you have a $100,000 property. They can pick it up for $30,000 because it's all a 'nod and a wink' agreed that no one else will bid.

So, you have people who would normally never end up with HUD properties acquire HUD properties at foreclosure sales because that is basically how they are going to get paid under the table for doing their various covert errands.

What was really funny was that one of the people who I suspected of putting the arsenic down the well – I’ll call him ‘Sam’ – had an assistant who shortly thereafter came to me and said, “Sam bought these properties at foreclosure for HUD, and he got an incredible deal on them, but we are really having trouble getting them closed. He asked me to process it, and he will kill me if I told you that this was the case, but I can’t get them closed. I know that you used to work at HUD, so maybe you could help.”

I said, “This is great! I’m being asked to help this guy get his ‘under the table’ payment in exchange for whatever services he may have provided locally to ‘the boys’, which might include putting arsenic down my well.”

There are more than a few of these very funny stories. At one point, Sam realized that I knew, and that was one of the most fun times I’ve ever had in Hickory Valley because it was absolutely frightening for him to realize that I had known all along. Certainly, the way that he behaved encouraged my belief that he was, in fact, somehow involved – whether it was that or one of the plenty of other little things that the locals did. I will talk about this later when it comes to the crime section, but for several years when I left Hickory Valley and came back, one possession of sentimental or financial value would have disappeared. That is when I discovered the art of using somebody’s own possessions as a weapon against them.

I will say this: Dealing with the risks with the locals was much better than dealing with the risks when you have the A Team and the B Team showing up in Washington DC.

One of the other things that happened to me when I first started to deal with the very bad physical harassment in my house in Washington was — — that I tried to hire private investigation firms on the belief that I didn't know much about the covert side, or I wasn't current on the covert side. They could help me understand what was going on.

Each time I would hire a firm I would brief them, they would check me out, and they would come back and say, "We can't work for you; it's too dangerous."

I thought, "Oh my God! What is going on here?" Of course, they wouldn't tell me what they learned on the background checks.

When they first turned up – before the background check – they saw how much money I had and who I was, and they were all eager for the assignment. Then there was a 180-degree turn, "No, it's too dangerous. We are out of here."

The last firm that turned me down – and after the third I gave up – there was a man who was an expert on low-grade biological warfare, which was all the rage at that time. He took pity on me. One of my concerns was that they were using electromagnetic weapons on me – and I was sure that they were – and he came and looked at me and said, "Look, lady. Don't worry about the electromagnetic weapons; you need to worry about low-grade biological warfare."

I said, "What do you mean?"

He said, "They are going to drill holes in your wall, and they are going to inject in aerosol form low-grade biological warfare. That is your big risk."

I said, “What should I do if you won’t help me?”

He said, “Buy birds.”

I said, “Birds? What do I do with the birds?”

He said, “If the birds die, get out of the house.”

I got birds. It was very interesting because whatever was happening – what we believe was the electromagnetic weaponry – at different times I had various people stay with me just so I wasn’t alone because it was dangerous. So, I had Gay Cooper, my old college roommate from the University of Pennsylvania, stay with me. We bought two birds and put one in her room, and one in my room in a cage.

We believe that the electromagnetic weaponry was happening at night. It was somewhat of a 9-5 shift when it would happen. It would get very bad at night when we were trying to sleep.

So, the first night we went to bed, and the weapons or the targeting started. The next morning, we took the cloths off the birds, and the birds actually fell off their perches. They acted like they were drunk. We would track that and the behavior of my dog at the time. When the animals and we all suddenly got diarrhea at the same moment, we realized, “Oh, this really is happening.”

So low-grade biological warfare is serious. One day when I was on the treadmill, which was about six months after I talked to this man and got the birds, I turned and looked. I observed a couple of holes in the wall. Sure enough, somebody had drilled holes in the wall.

During that period of about 18 months, I had a low-grade cold and flu all the time. It felt totally unnatural – almost synthetic. Every time I would start to get over it, bam!, it would happen again. So, I was sick in a low-grade way for 18 months straight. Of course, it made getting the work done that much harder.

It was one of the reasons I finally gave up, sold the house, and left Washington. Amid whatever was happening from 9-5 at night, and the electromagnetic storm and the holes in the wall and the flu and everything else, it was clearly not a place I wanted to live. So out I went.

One of the health problems for people who are targeted – and we saw this around us although it didn't happen to me personally – was inducing terminal diseases, either fast-acting cancer or heart attacks. The heart attacks may be terminal or not.

We had a couple of people in and out around our situation. We had one judge, and a qui tam lawsuit was filed under seal. You have a limited amount of time to do an investigation and prove that there is wrongdoing. If you can't prove it within a limited period of time, you have to unseal it and tell the target that they are the target of a qui tam.

These people managed to keep the qui tam under seal for years, and while they were doing a fishing expedition and they couldn't find anything, when we finally got it unsealed it took another year to get the transcripts unsealed, and the most valuable ones had disappeared. They just said, "Oh, they're missing."

Even in the ones we obtained, we found the judge trying to coach the lawyers in how to frame us. The new judge, having kept it open — — after the first judge died with fast acting cancer shortly after he refused to extend the qui tam, told them that he was only giving it one more period and that they had better come up with something. He was replaced by the former CIA General Counsel, Stanley Sporkin, who, of course, found a way to keep the fishing expedition going for years. He was continually getting more and more frustrated because they couldn't come up with anything on the fishing expedition, and all the different attempts to falsify evidence or frame us failed.

In a couple of instances, we caught them and we could prove that they were breaking the law and falsifying evidence. Of course, they never were held accountable for that, but we tried.

The judge practiced the law, and was diagnosed with fast-acting cancer and was replaced by the General Counsel of the CIA.

I won't get into it, but during the loan sale, one of the technicians at AT&T Bell Labs had a heart attack and moved off the project. I think that could have been related to how they tried to create the problem in the first place.

When you go back and look, one of the important facts in the targeting area was that the Department of Defense and the Department of Justice reached an agreement in the early 1990's to allow the Department of Justice to prototype nonlethal weapons for domestic applications. There is a lot to indicate that some of what we were dealing with is that sort of prototyping.

I remember when I was in the home in Washington, I had somebody with many contacts, contact me. They basically said, "They are using this kind of weaponry on you."

At first I didn't believe it – despite all the bizarre happenings at night. I was very wealthy, I was very successful, and I was very clean. I couldn't fathom that the CIA and the Department of Justice were teamed up and would use electromagnetic weapons to torture me. It was rather like, “Wait a minute. This is America. I don't get it.”

I asked one person, “Have you ever seen anything like this happen to anyone you know?”

He said, “Yes, but you are the only white person.”

It was always very hard to understand the electromagnetic radiation torture. Now there is a whole body of work by targeted individuals.

One thing that would happen, and as I said it would occur at night from 9-5, is I would find myself going around the house trying to find someplace where this microwave-type of cooking of your body wouldn't happen. Sometimes if I could sleep in the closet, it wouldn't be as bad as if I was only in the regular bedroom. But each time it happened, my body would get this horrible sweat. It was really like being cooked in a microwave, and that is exactly what it felt like. I would get this horrible sweat with a particular smell.

It was very interesting after I left Washington – in part to get away from this – I was in Montana in 2005 and started detoxing. I was making some money, and was finally able to buy an ion cleanse machine, which I use to this day. A year before I settled the litigation, I would feel that I had been, “Ridden hard and put away wet,” as Franklin Sanders would say.

My body had been through the grinder for this 11-year period. It was very amazing as a physical feat to survive it.

One of the reasons I started the detox when I got to Montana was that every morning when I would wake up, the first sensation or emotion that I would feel was just overwhelming, incredible grief.

So, I got the ion-cleanse machine, and started to detox. After every detox session for the first three months, the water smelled just like the sweat when I was in Washington living through those nights. It was a horrible smell.

After about three months of doing the cleanse, I realized that the smell was gone in the water. The next morning when I woke up, the grief was gone. I realized that the grief wasn't really emotional; that grief was the physical remainder of the physical remnants of being cooked in your own home by these weapons in a situation where there is nothing that you can do other than leave. There is no one who you can call. The people who you as a taxpayer are paying to enforce the law are the ones who are cooking you.

I could go on and on about my different interactions with the Department of Justice and the local police and the local enforcement regulators.

It reminds me of a story that I thought very much fit with this issue. Several years ago, I was in Los Angeles. Some of my clients asked me to go to dinner. It was right after the tsunami in Japan, so maybe it was seven or eight years ago. We had salmon and I went back to where I was staying, and I got the worst food poisoning in the world. It was just horrible.

I've had food poisoning several times in my life, and this was much worse. It came with that same sensation of grief that I felt when I was doing the ion-cleanse machine in Montana in 2005. I've never felt grief that overwhelming.

I called an energetic healer who I know, and said, "Where is this grief coming from?"

She said, "The salmon that you ate had eaten some of the dead bodies from Fukushima."

Is it true? I don't know, but you are talking about that kind of grief.

One of the most challenging things about the selective targeting that is done in these kinds of situations when you want to slow someone down or stop them or manage them or control them is that so much of the weaponry that is being used against you is invisible. It's electromagnetic weaponry; it's low-grade biological warfare; it's poisoning. If you are going to do what someone like me did during the litigation or what I do now, you need the ability to handle these things and deal with them without requiring the sympathy or compassion of other people. What is happening is invisible, and it is very difficult to, 1) Figure out what is going on, and 2) Prove anything to anybody.

I remember a healthcare practitioner during the litigation. I told him repeatedly that I had been poisoned. Then when I finally was able to afford to do all the testing, I remember sending him my tests. They called me and said, "Oh my God! You were poisoned."

I was kind of surprised. I said, “I told you that. You already knew that.”

He said, “I never believed you.”

So, you have to be prepared to keep your own counsel and to try to make your own sound and grounded judgements without affirmation, which is difficult for many people. After all, we are very much community-minded and herd-minded; we like affirmation.

I am one of those people who doesn't love working alone; I love to work with other people, and I feel that shared intelligence is often much more intelligent than an individual alone.

One thing that I learned about is I have to deal with all sorts of phenomena that other people who don't have training or background in covert operations and don't understand these things and cannot fathom that this is going on. They can't see it because it's not visible.

The other thing that I've said, and if you've been with Solari for a while, you've heard me talk about this before. It is one of my favorite stories and surprises on The Solari Report, which was when I interviewed Dr. Scott, who had done enormous research on Morgellons Disease and the physical impact of the global spraying.

I did a pre-interview with her, and we were going to do a discussion of what global spraying does to your body and what you can do to physically protect yourself.

It was some of the most frightening information I had ever dealt with. So after doing the pre-interview, I did ten sessions on my Quantron Resonance System, trying get myself back into balance and coherence again.

I called her back and said, “Look, we are not going to talk about what it does to you physically; we are going to talk about the ten action steps that you can take to protect yourself because we need to just protect.”

She listened to it, and said, “That is very good, but you forgot the most important one.”

I said, “What is that?”

She said, “Grace. You forgot the power of grace. If you look at what is going on, we should all be dead, but we are not. So, something else is happening.”

In 2005 I went to see a remarkable healer in Montana. He was in his 70’s and had been practicing since he was very, very young, and is a gifted, natural healer.

I explained a little about what had happened and the poisoning, particularly the very, very bad poisoning that had happened subsequent to the Condoleezza Rice letter, and he confirmed that, ‘yes’, these were all poisonings. He said, “The one in 2004, the intention was for you to die. It was supposed to kill you.”

I said to him, “Why am I alive?”

He looked me squarely in the eye. He was very straight, and said, “In my lifetime I’ve had over 100,000 patients. I would say that physically you are one of the ten strongest.”

I said, “Why?”

He said, “You lucked out in the gene department.” So maybe I did. But I will say this: If you go back and look at the process of learning all these different ways of targeting a person – whether visible or invisible – I’m still alive, and it’s quite a miracle. There are many, many stories of miracles of what happened to me.

It got to the point during the litigation that I just started to appeal for miracles. It was like, “Okay, angels, we are ready. It’s time for a miracle.”

Never underestimate the power of grace.

That is it for health. At this point, I am going to say that that is enough for Part I. We will pick up in Part II, and will start with C. Communication and Surveillance.

Remember, we have 14 more of the tactic areas to go through. This has been Deep State Tactics 101, Part I. Thank you for joining me ladies and gentlemen, and please remember: Don’t worry about whether or not there is a conspiracy. If you’re not in a conspiracy, you need to start one.

Good Night and Good Luck!
